

From: Frank Miller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frank Miller
United Kingdom

Note: Frank Miller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Diana
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Diana
United Kingdom

Note: Diana sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Luca De Felice
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Luca De Felice
Italy

Note: Luca De Felice sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tim Horgan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tim Horgan
Ireland

—

Note: Tim Horgan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Melissa James
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Melissa James
United Kingdom

Note: Melissa James sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sten
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sten
Estonia

Note: Sten sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Suzanne Gelsthorpe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Suzanne Gelsthorpe
United Kingdom

Note: Suzanne Gelsthorpe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kosmas Nikolaou
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kosmas Nikolaou
Greece

—

Note: Kosmas Nikolaou sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr. Barna Kovacs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr. Barna Kovacs
Hungary

Note: Dr. Barna Kovacs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robin Stent
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robin Stent
United Kingdom

Note: Robin Stent sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jessica
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jessica
United Kingdom

Note: Jessica sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Josephine Thelermont
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Josephine Thelermont
United Kingdom

Note: Josephine Thelermont sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A Williams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

A Williams
United Kingdom

Note: A Williams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Diana de Roode
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas de Roode
Netherlands

Note: Thomas de Roode sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Beryl Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Beryl Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Beryl Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Synnöve
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Synnöve
Sweden

Note: Synnöve sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Owen Tobin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Owen Tobin
Ireland

Note: Owen Tobin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A. Schaffer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

A. Schaffer
Netherlands

Note: A. Schaffer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Irene Goodwin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Irene Goodwin
France

—

Note: Irene Goodwin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Harold Weaver
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Free internet is an indisputable right of a European resident. Democracy and freedom is yet again threatened by the actions of the corporate elite.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Harold Weaver
United Kingdom

Note: Harold Weaver sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bojan Groselj
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bojan Groselj
Slovenia

Note: Bojan Groselj sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shaul Abrahams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shaul Abrahams
United Kingdom

Note: Shaul Abrahams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Wooller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Wooller
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Wooller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: violeta.kolarova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

violeta.kolarova
Bulgaria

Note: violeta.kolarova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Terri Harrison
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Terri Harrison
Ireland

Note: Terri Harrison sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Monica
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Monica
Sweden

Note: Monica sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jasper Griepink
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jasper Griepink
Netherlands

Note: Jasper Griepink sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cliff Linden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cliff Linden
United Kingdom

Note: Cliff Linden sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ray brooks
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ray brooks
United Kingdom

Note: ray brooks sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eric Jugier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eric Jugier
France

—

Note: Eric Jugier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anthony Woods
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anthony Woods
United Kingdom

Note: Anthony Woods sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: T.J.Penters
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

T.J.Penters
Netherlands

Note: T.J.Penters sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sally Robertson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sally Robertson
United Kingdom

Note: Sally Robertson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Judith Beulink
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Judith Beulink
Netherlands

Note: Judith Beulink sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ronja Viklund
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ronja Viklund
Sweden

Note: Ronja Viklund sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Toon van der Weijst
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Toon van der Weijst
Netherlands

Note: Toon van der Weijst sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Micaela Sorin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Micaela Sorin
Romania

Note: Micaela Sorin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elaine Russell-Wilks
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elaine Russell-Wilks
United Kingdom

Note: Elaine Russell-Wilks sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Diane Lloyd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Diane Lloyd
United Kingdom

Note: Diane Lloyd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caroline Old
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caroline Old
United Kingdom

Note: Caroline Old sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Strunk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Strunk
Germany

Note: Jan Strunk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Vaughan OBE
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Vaughan OBE
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Vaughan OBE sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mackenzie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mackenzie
United Kingdom

Note: Mackenzie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: james bloom
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

james bloom
Germany

—

Note: james bloom sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leah Blake
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leah Blake
United Kingdom

Note: Leah Blake sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: derek turner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

derek turner
United Kingdom

Note: derek turner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicola Stevenson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicola Stevenson
United Kingdom

Note: Nicola Stevenson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tom Meehan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tom Meehan
Ireland

—

Note: Tom Meehan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rolf Wikström
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rolf Wikström
Sweden

Note: Rolf Wikström sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carole Nichols
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carole Nichols
United Kingdom

Note: Carole Nichols sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barry Durdant-Hollamby
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barry Durdant-Hollamby
United Kingdom

Note: Barry Durdant-Hollamby sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: D. P. de Held
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

D. P. de Held
Germany

Note: D. P. de Held sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jo Habib
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jo Habib
United Kingdom

Note: Jo Habib sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Metcalfe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

If we allow ‘fast lanes’ for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a ‘slow lane’. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.

I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, “zero-rating” or class-based traffic management.

In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it’s Europe’s turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Metcalfe
Austria

Note: Christine Metcalfe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roy Hunter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roy Hunter
United Kingdom

Note: Roy Hunter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eva Karlsson Nordlöf
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eva Karlsson Nordlöf
Sweden

—

Note: Eva Karlsson Nordlöf sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Grant
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Grant
United Kingdom

Note: Grant sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Luben Goranov
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Luben Goranov
Bulgaria

Note: Luben Goranov sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nigel Gordon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nigel Gordon
Ireland

—

Note: Nigel Gordon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Niklas Gref
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Niklas Gref
Sweden

Note: Niklas Gref sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Riley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Riley
United Kingdom

Note: Steve Riley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mr beal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mr beal
United Kingdom

Note: Mr beal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Owen Hockey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Owen Hockey
United Kingdom

Note: Owen Hockey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angela Palmer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angela Palmer
United Kingdom

Note: Angela Palmer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lin Richards
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lin Richards
United Kingdom

Note: Lin Richards sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Stone
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Stone
United Kingdom

Note: John Stone sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Toby Clark
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Toby Clark
United Kingdom

Note: Toby Clark sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Roberts
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Roberts
United Kingdom

Note: Anne Roberts sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marion
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marion
Belgium

Note: Marion sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Hepburn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Hepburn
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Hepburn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zoltan Dienes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zoltan Dienes
United Kingdom

Note: Zoltan Dienes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helder Veloso Rodrigues
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helder Veloso Rodrigues
Portugal

Note: Helder Veloso Rodrigues sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Berkelaar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Berkelaar
Netherlands

Note: Martin Berkelaar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Roennow
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Roennow
Denmark

Note: Brian Roennow sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Calum
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Calum
United Kingdom

Note: Calum sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christiaan Warger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christiaan Warger
Netherlands

Note: Christiaan Warger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tim Ramsay
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tim Ramsay
United Kingdom

Note: Tim Ramsay sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Markus Engel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Markus Engel
Germany

Note: Markus Engel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Viviann Seege
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Viviann Seege
Finland

—

Note: Viviann Seege sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sally francis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sally francis
United Kingdom

Note: Sally francis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Friedhoff
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Friedhoff
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew Friedhoff sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jorge Mayer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jorge Mayer
Portugal

Note: Jorge Mayer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hans Alves
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hans Alves
Netherlands

Note: Hans Alves sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Francis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Francis
Ireland

—

Note: Francis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Aitken
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Aitken
United Kingdom

Note: Christine Aitken sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Crt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Crt
Slovenia

Note: Crt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul
United Kingdom

Note: Paul sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Debra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Debra
Austria

Note: Debra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Tummon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Tummon
United Kingdom

Note: John Tummon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kevin Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kevin Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Kevin Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen Kennedy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen Kennedy
Ireland

—

Note: Karen Kennedy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Irina Pugna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Irina Pugna
Romania

Note: Irina Pugna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane Hart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane Hart
United Kingdom

Note: Jane Hart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ruth Fryer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ruth Fryer
United Kingdom

Note: Ruth Fryer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Diane Mattin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Diane Mattin
Spain

—

Note: Diane Mattin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paula Lewis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paula Lewis
United Kingdom

Note: Paula Lewis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rodney and Judith Ward
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rodney and Judith Ward
United Kingdom

Note: Rodney and Judith Ward sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frank Zevenster
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frank Zevenster
Netherlands

Note: Frank Zevenster sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Judy King
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Judy King
United Kingdom

Note: Judy King sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: bettina mead
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

bettina mead
United Kingdom

Note: bettina mead sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michal Risler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michal Risler
Czech Republic

Note: Michal Risler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony Murphy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony Murphy
Spain

Note: Tony Murphy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alessandra Barzini
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alessandra Barzini
Belgium

Note: Alessandra Barzini sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kobus van Unen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kobus van Unen
Netherlands

Note: Kobus van Unen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wim Stenfert Kroese
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wim Stenfert Kroese
Netherlands

Note: Wim Stenfert Kroese sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ana Pereira
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ana Pereira
United Kingdom

Note: Ana Pereira sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Henrik Bagge
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Henrik Bagge
Sweden

Note: Henrik Bagge sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Giovanni Lattanzi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Giovanni Lattanzi
Netherlands

Note: Giovanni Lattanzi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eric Lebert Hirvi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eric Lebert Hirvi
Sweden

—

Note: Eric Lebert Hirvi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: pauline gardiner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

pauline gardiner
United Kingdom

Note: pauline gardiner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lavinia Hrimiuc
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lavinia Hrimiuc
Romania

Note: Lavinia Hrimiuc sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dennis Wivell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dennis Wivell
United Kingdom

Note: Dennis Wivell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alison Burnett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alison Burnett
United Kingdom

Note: Alison Burnett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sampsa Pirtola
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sampsa Pirtola
Finland

Note: Sampsa Pirtola sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bill Kicher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bill Kicher
United Kingdom

Note: Bill Kicher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Vlaanderen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Vlaanderen
Netherlands

Note: Richard Vlaanderen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: R. Wainwright
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Tim Berners-Lee invented the World Wide Web in 1989. He founded the Web Foundation whose mission is that the WWW serves Humanity (i.e. the WWW was his FREE GIFT to Humanity). How can any moral company or group conceive of taking this and prioritising it for their own commercial use? That is a disgusting use of corporate power.

Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.

If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.

I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.

In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For these reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines to ensure that there are NO loopholes that can allow any deviation from the Net Neutrality principle.

--

R. Wainwright
United Kingdom

Note: R. Wainwright sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mrs P Peters
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Mrs P Peters
United Kingdom

Note: Mrs P Peters sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kerry
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kerry
United Kingdom

Note: Kerry sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J.Norris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J Norris
United Kingdom

Note: J Norris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M Bois
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M Bois
United Kingdom

Note: M Bois sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leslie Martin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leslie Martin
United Kingdom

Note: Leslie Martin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger Good dears-Coote
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger Good dears-Coote
United Kingdom

Note: Roger Good dears-Coote sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Bartlett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Bartlett
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Bartlett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joy Ford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joy Ford
United Kingdom

Note: Joy Ford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: james_jenkinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

james_jenkinson
United Kingdom

Note: james_jenkinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: nuno silva
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

nuno silva
Portugal

Note: nuno silva sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jimmy S
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jimmy S
Sweden

—

Note: Jimmy S sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stewart Howarth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stewart Howarth
United Kingdom

Note: Stewart Howarth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lorna Bastable
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lorna Bastable
United Kingdom

Note: Lorna Bastable sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Theo Giesbers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Theo Giesbers
Netherlands

Note: Theo Giesbers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sharon Lord
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carl Ward
United Kingdom

Note: Carl Ward sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: giulio
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

giulio
Italy

Note: giulio sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Debbie Wall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Debbie Wall
United Kingdom

Note: Debbie Wall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Toyin Morafa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Toyin Morafa
United Kingdom

Note: Toyin Morafa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jude Higgins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jude Higgins
United Kingdom

Note: Jude Higgins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Franciska Farkas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Franciska Farkas
Hungary

Note: Franciska Farkas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Moorby
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Moorby
United Kingdom

Note: Anna Moorby sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: JC Sabel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

JC Sabel
Netherlands

Note: JC Sabel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Catherine Bolton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Catherine Bolton
United Kingdom

Note: Catherine Bolton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Robert Adamczyk-Haswell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Robert Adamczyk-Haswell
Germany

Note: Peter Robert Adamczyk-Haswell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Alderson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Alderson
United Kingdom

Note: James Alderson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linda
United Kingdom

Note: Linda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mavis Gray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mavis Gray
United Kingdom

Note: Mavis Gray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frances Østerfelt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frances Østerfelt
Denmark

Note: Frances Østerfelt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barrie Pleasance
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barrie Pleasance
United Kingdom

Note: Barrie Pleasance sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: MS C A RICHARDS
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

MS C A RICHARDS
Switzerland

Note: MS C A RICHARDS sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: george corner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

george corner
United Kingdom

Note: george corner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anonymous
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anonymous
France

—

Note: Anonymous sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kevin Grice
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kevin Grice
United Kingdom

Note: Kevin Grice sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simon Perry
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simon Perry
United Kingdom

Note: Simon Perry sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Šimon Pellar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Šimon Pellar
Czech Republic

Note: Šimon Pellar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr Christopher A Birt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr Christopher A Birt
United Kingdom

Note: Dr Christopher A Birt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Per Hansson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Per Hansson
Sweden

Note: Per Hansson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chrysos Chrysostomou
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chrysos Chrysostomou
Cyprus

Note: Chrysos Chrysostomou sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Gaska
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Gaska
United Kingdom

Note: Jan Gaska sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stavroula Triantafyllidou
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stavroula Triantafyllidou
Greece

—

Note: Stavroula Triantafyllidou sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Yannis Kara
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Yannis Kara
Greece

Note: Yannis Kara sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steven Patton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steven Patton
United Kingdom

Note: Steven Patton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Magnus Ström
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Magnus Ström
Sweden

Note: Magnus Ström sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marie-Helene Jakob
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marie-Helene Jakob
France

—

Note: Marie-Helene Jakob sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: pauline furness
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

pauline furness
United Kingdom

Note: pauline furness sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ANTON HARDER
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ANTON HARDER
United Kingdom

Note: ANTON HARDER sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tichi Márton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tichi Márton
Hungary

Note: Tichi Márton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Benny
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Benny
Sweden

Note: Benny sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: K
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

K
United Kingdom

Note: K sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: zefi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

zefi
Greece

—

Note: zefi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Estelle Feldman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Estelle Feldman
Ireland

—

Note: Estelle Feldman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Siobhan McDonnell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Siobhan McDonnell
United Kingdom

Note: Siobhan McDonnell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonathan Verner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonathan Verner
Czech Republic

Note: Jonathan Verner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: heidi.Lidholm
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

heidi Lidholm
Ireland

—

Note: heidi Lidholm sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: janet.cornish
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

janet.cornish
United Kingdom

Note: janet.cornish sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynne Lemon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynne Lemon
United Kingdom

Note: Lynne Lemon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rachel Monaghan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rachel Monaghan
United Kingdom

Note: Rachel Monaghan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stefan Lestander
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stefan Lestander
Sweden

—

Note: Stefan Lestander sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicholas Minns
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like Avaaz to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicholas Minns
United Kingdom

Note: Nicholas Minns sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael York
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael York
United Kingdom

Note: Michael York sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eva Maria Larsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eva Maria Larsson
Denmark

Note: Eva Maria Larsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: dean
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

dean
United Kingdom

Note: dean sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matthias Heil
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matthias Heil
Germany

Note: Matthias Heil sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: camelia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

camelia
Romania

Note: camelia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Thuring
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Thuring
United Kingdom

Note: Christine Thuring sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stig Pettersson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stig Pettersson
Sweden

—

Note: Stig Pettersson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Howley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Howley
Ireland

—

Note: Michael Howley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Trinder
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Trinder
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Trinder sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: mihaela_grigore
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

mihaela grigore
Romania

Note: mihaela grigore sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annie Jones
U.K.

—

Note: Anne Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mantas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mantas
Lithuania

Note: Mantas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sheila miller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sheila miller
United Kingdom

Note: sheila miller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephan Motzek
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephan Motzek
Deutschland

Note: Stephan Motzek sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Perry
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Perry
United Kingdom

Note: Jan Perry sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Denise Bennett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Denise Bennett
United Kingdom

Note: Denise Bennett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lisa Robosn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lisa Robosn
United Kingdom

Note: Lisa Robosn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rebecca Fernandez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rebecca Fernandez
United Kingdom

Note: Rebecca Fernandez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Da Prato Julie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Da Prato Julie
France

Note: Da Prato Julie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julian Dye
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julian Dye
United Kingdom

Note: Julian Dye sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hazel Sheridan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hazel Sheridan
Ireland

—

Note: Hazel Sheridan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lyn Nesbitt-Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lyn Nesbitt-Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Lyn Nesbitt-Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Evershed
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Evershed
United Kingdom

Note: James Evershed sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kirsten
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kirsten
United Kingdom

Note: Kirsten sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ute Kryger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ute Kryger
Germany

Note: Ute Kryger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lise Thurgood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lise Thurgood
United Kingdom

Note: Lise Thurgood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alan Martin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alan Martin
United Kingdom

Note: Alan Martin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gloria Knight
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gloria Knight
United Kingdom

Note: Gloria Knight sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniela
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniela
Spain

Note: Daniela sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adam Beale
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adam Beale
United Kingdom

Note: Adam Beale sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Bullock-Wilkins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Bullock-Wilkins
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Bullock-Wilkins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicholas Montieth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicholas Montieth
United Kingdom

Note: Nicholas Montieth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carmelo Amenta
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carmelo Amenta
United Kingdom

Note: Carmelo Amenta sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Carmen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Carmen
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Carmen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Melanie Ranatunga
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Melanie Ranatunga
United Kingdom

Note: Melanie Ranatunga sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: K. Dölitzscher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

K. Dölitzscher
Germany

Note: K. Dölitzscher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Drew Ashworth-Clements
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Drew Ashworth-Clements
United Kingdom

Note: Drew Ashworth-Clements sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Clarke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Clarke
United Kingdom

Note: John Clarke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kay
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kay
United Kingdom

Note: Kay sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: wienerpeter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

wienerpeter
Germany

Note: wienerpeter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carol
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carol
United Kingdom

Note: Carol sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helmut Schmidt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helmut Schmidt
Germany

—

Note: Helmut Schmidt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Evans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Evans
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Evans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Scott Birnie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Scott Birnie
United Kingdom

Note: Scott Birnie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Clare Disano
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Clare Disano
United Kingdom

Note: Clare Disano sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Ballweg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Ballweg
Germany

—

Note: Michael Ballweg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Costa da Silva
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Costa da Silva
Italy

Note: Costa da Silva sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Winifred
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

]Winifred
United Kingdom

Note: [Winifred] sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gitta B.
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gitta B.
Germany

Note: Gitta B. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elizabeth Ascu
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elizabeth Ascu
United Kingdom

Note: Elizabeth Ascu sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ben Coughlan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ben Coughlan
United Kingdom

Note: Ben Coughlan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Diane Keyworth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Diane Keyworth
France

—

Note: Diane Keyworth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Lovering
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Lovering
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Lovering sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sofia Rezgui
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sofia Rezgui
Netherlands

Note: sofia Rezgui sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adele Sicarius
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adele Sicarius
United Kingdom

Note: Adele Sicarius sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: FELIX
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

FELIX
Belgium

Note: FELIX sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gary Evans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gary Evans
United Kingdom

Note: Gary Evans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas Ort
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas Ort
Germany

Note: Thomas Ort sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Francis S Mendes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Francis S Mendes
United Kingdom

Note: Francis S Mendes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katja Brestyensky
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir or Madam,

Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.

If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.

I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.

- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Katja Brestyensky
Austria

Note: Katja Brestyensky sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stan Zachary
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stan Zachary
United Kingdom

Note: Stan Zachary sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Else Nielsen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Else Nielsen
Sweden

—

Note: Else Nielsen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Becky
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Becky
United Kingdom

Note: Becky sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Mussett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Mussett
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew Mussett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jose Miguel Ojeda Lopez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jose Miguel Ojeda Lopez
Spain

—

Note: Jose Miguel Ojeda Lopez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M. Ramplin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M. Ramplin
United Kingdom

Note: M. Ramplin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janet Byrne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janet Byrne
United Kingdom

Note: Janet Byrne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: alan gartland
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

alan gartland
United Kingdom

Note: alan gartland sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martti Kopra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martti Kopra
Sweden

Note: Martti Kopra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Graham Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Graham Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Graham Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jakob Stampe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jakob Stampe
Denmark

Note: Jakob Stampe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tina Seaton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tina Seaton
United Kingdom

Note: Tina Seaton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sneza Levstik
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sneza Levstik
Slovenia

Note: sneza Levstik sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matthew Webb
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matthew Webb
United Kingdom

Note: Matthew Webb sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Raghuramkalyanam
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Raghuramkalyanam
Germany

Note: Raghuramkalyanam sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sofia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sofia
Greece

—

Note: sofia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mr. Ian Anderson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

—

Note: Mr. Ian Anderson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: S Lankey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

S Lankey
United Kingdom

Note: S Lankey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Russell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Russell
United Kingdom

Note: Russell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan
Slovakia

Note: Jan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robin Shepperson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robin Shepperson
Ireland

—

Note: Robin Shepperson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Francoise Clastrier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Françoise Clastrier
France

—

Note: Françoise Clastrier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Bergin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Bergin
United Kingdom

Note: Christine Bergin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marion Inchmore
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marion Inchmore
United Kingdom

Note: Marion Inchmore sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robin Baldock
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robin Baldock
United Kingdom

Note: Robin Baldock sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: polly hoare
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

polly hoare
United Kingdom

Note: polly hoare sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Banerji
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Banerji
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Banerji sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alice Hyde
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alice Hyde
United Kingdom

Note: Alice Hyde sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarah Welling
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarah Welling
Netherlands

Note: Sarah Welling sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alejandro
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alejandro
Sweden

Note: Alejandro sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kevin Willsher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

We need to keep an internet for all, not let the rich and powerful take it over!

Do not let the Telecom giants get their way. Stand up for the people and keep the internet the way it is.

Regards, Kevin Willsher

Cher Monsieur / Madame,

Nous devons garder un Internet pour tous, ne pas laisser la prise riche et puissant au-dessus !

Ne laissez pas les géants Telecom obtiennent leur chemin . Levez-vous pour les gens et de garder l' Internet comme il est .

Cordialement, Kevin Willsher

From: Ian Brooks
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Brooks
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Brooks sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rosemary
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rosemary
United Kingdom

Note: Rosemary sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sylvia Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sylvia Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Sylvia Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matthijs joor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matthijs joor
Netherlands

Note: Matthijs joor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jutta
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jutta
Malta

—

Note: jutta sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Olaf
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Olaf
Poland

—

Note: Olaf sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: JAVIER LEZCANO
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

JAVIER LEZCANO
Spain

—

Note: JAVIER LEZCANO sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jennifer Lonsdale
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jennifer Lonsdale
United Kingdom

Note: Jennifer Lonsdale sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Josef
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Josef
Germany

—

Note: Josef sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Wood-Gee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Wood-Gee
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Wood-Gee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex
Ireland

—

Note: Alex sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rachel Melrose
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

It will have an impact on small business users, as well as the huge majority of us who use the internet to keep in touch with relatives, news stories and world events, if major corporations take over what was, originally, a free global service.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rachel Melrose
United Kingdom

Note: Rachel Melrose sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: GINNY Martin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

GINNY Martin
United Kingdom

Note: GINNY Martin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Easen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Easen
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Easen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Denis Sheehan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Denis Sheehan
Ireland

Note: Denis Sheehan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ben
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ben
United Kingdom

Note: Ben sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nabeel Yafai
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nabeel Yafai
United Kingdom

Note: Nabeel Yafai sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dea
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dea
Denmark

Note: Dea sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sander Smid
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sander Smid
Netherlands

Note: Sander Smid sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Berrow
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Berrow
United Kingdom

Note: Christine Berrow sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sue Brunton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sue Brunton
United Kingdom

Note: Sue Brunton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: anne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

anne
United Kingdom

Note: anne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hugh Robinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hugh Robinson
United Kingdom

Note: Hugh Robinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Judith Littlemore
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Judith Littlemore
United Kingdom

Note: Judith Littlemore sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marcell Tóth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marcell Tóth
Hungary

Note: Marcell Tóth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J.Hayes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J Hayes
United Kingdom

Note: J Hayes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alan Bradford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alan Bradford
United Kingdom

Note: Alan Bradford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ann Churcher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Keep our internet free & open: Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ann Churcher
United Kingdom

Note: Ann Churcher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Wiinblad
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Wiinblad
Denmark

Note: Susan Wiinblad sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alain Degendt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alain Degendt
Belgium

Note: Alain Degendt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susanne Flamsholt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susanne Flamsholt
Denmark

Note: Susanne Flamsholt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jessica van der Heijden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jessica van der Heijden
Netherlands

Note: Jessica van der Heijden sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Rand
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Rand
United Kingdom

Note: James Rand sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janet styles
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/Gu248azidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janet styles
United Kingdom

Note: Janet styles sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nathan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nathan
United Kingdom

Note: Nathan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Meredith Coates
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Meredith Coates
United Kingdom

Note: Meredith Coates sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Jungbluth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Jungbluth
Germany

Note: Jan Jungbluth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Hobbs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Hobbs
United Kingdom

Note: John Hobbs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julia
United Kingdom

Note: Julia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Giles Dawson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Giles Dawson
United Kingdom

Note: Giles Dawson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Burton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Burton
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Burton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonathan Crabtree Parker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonathan Crabtree Parker
United Kingdom

Note: Jonathan Crabtree Parker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Tarr
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Tarr
United Kingdom

Note: Steve Tarr sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonas Kibitzki
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonas Kibitzki
Germany

—

Note: Jonas Kibitzki sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony Cooke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony Cooke
United Kingdom

Note: Tony Cooke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard
United Kingdom

Note: Richard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tim Gibson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tim Gibson
France

—

Note: Tim Gibson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Rowan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Rowan
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Rowan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joanna McMahon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joanna McMahon
United Kingdom

Note: Joanna McMahon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Magdalena Erlandsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Magdalena Erlandsson
Sweden

—

Note: Magdalena Erlandsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: arne hou uerkvitz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

arne hou uerkvitz
Denmark

Note: arne hou uerkvitz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Blackburn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Blackburn
United Kingdom

Note: David Blackburn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Riyaz Ahmad Malik
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Riyaz Ahmad Malik
Gibraltar

—

Note: Riyaz Ahmad Malik sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kolev
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kolev
Bulgaria

Note: Kolev sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Moritz Bartsch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Moritz Bartsch
Germany

Note: Moritz Bartsch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dorcas ODell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dorcas ODell
[United Kingdom.]

Note: Dorcas ODell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Bentley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Bentley
Portugal

Note: John Bentley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stewart Macdonald
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stewart Macdonald
France

Note: Stewart Macdonald sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Giovanna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Giovanna
United Kingdom

Note: Giovanna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Littlejohns
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Littlejohns
United Kingdom

Note: David Littlejohns sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hilary Lawrence
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hilary Lawrence
United Kingdom

Note: Hilary Lawrence sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David McInnes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David McInnes
United Kingdom

Note: David McInnes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jacqueline Rose
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jacqueline Rose
United Kingdom

Note: Jacqueline Rose sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Walter Steiner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Walter Steiner
Canada

Note: Walter Steiner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Godden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Godden
France

—

Note: Ian Godden sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: john
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

john
Ireland

—

Note: john sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Grant
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Grant
United Kingdom

Note: Brian Grant sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wendy fletcher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wendy fletcher
United Kingdom

Note: Wendy fletcher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jayne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jayne
United Kingdom

Note: Jayne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margaret Forbes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margaret Forbes
United Kingdom

Note: Margaret Forbes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stuart Reid
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stuart Reid
United Kingdom

Note: Stuart Reid sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jim Clarke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jim Clarke
United Kingdom

Note: Jim Clarke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christina Yates
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christina Yates
United Kingdom

Note: Christina Yates sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kim Grønberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kim Grønberg
Denmark

Note: Kim Grønberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dominik Tanck
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dominik Tanck
Germany

—

Note: Dominik Tanck sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Harriet Evans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Harriet Evans
United Kingdom

Note: Harriet Evans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Cashman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Cashman
Ireland

—

Note: John Cashman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Niels Emil Vestergaard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Niels Emil Vestergaard
Denmark

Note: Niels Emil Vestergaard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Watson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Watson
United Kingdom

Note: John Watson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne
United Kingdom

Note: Anne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Piotr Belkiewicz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Piotr Belkiewicz
Polska

—

Note: Piotr Belkiewicz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexandre Crémieux
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexandre Crémieux
France

—

Note: Alexandre Crémieux sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Santa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Santa
Latvia

—

Note: Santa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Wright
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Wright
United Kingdom

Note: Anna Wright sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: henry dosedla
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

henry dosedla
Germany

—

Note: henry dosedla sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Annette dinsen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annette dinsen
Denmark

Note: Annette dinsen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Professor Chris Stillman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Professor Chris Stillman
Ireland

—

Note: Professor Chris Stillman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Catharina Hiort
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Catharina Hiort
Sweden

Note: Catharina Hiort sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A. Leach
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

A. Leach
United Kingdom

Note: A. Leach sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sonja O'Brien
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sonja O'Brien
Ireland

Note: Sonja O'Brien sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elina Hytönen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elina Hytönen
Finland

Note: Elina Hytönen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: rouxel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

rouxel
France

—

Note: rouxel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Noelle Martin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Noelle Martin
United Kingdom

Note: Noelle Martin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Yvette Hill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Yvette Hill
United Kingdom

Note: Yvette Hill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Wszolek
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Wszolek
United Kingdom

Note: Anna Wszolek sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: George
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

George
United Kingdom

Note: George sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christian Wilton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christian Wilton
United Kingdom

Note: Christian Wilton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Charlton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Charlton
United Kingdom

Note: John Charlton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Rechnitz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Rechnitz
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Rechnitz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Hack
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin
United Kingdom

Note: Martin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Weir
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Weir
United Kingdom

Note: Anne Weir sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Farhan Masani
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Farhan Masani
United Kingdom

Note: Farhan Masani sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Keith Donachie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Keith Donachie
United Kingdom

Note: Keith Donachie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jeanne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jeanne
Netherlands

—

Note: Jeanne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Connolly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Connolly
United Kingdom

Note: Brian Connolly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ro joyce
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ro joyce
Ireland

—

Note: Ro joyce sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: thomas.persson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

thomas.persson
Sweden

Note: thomas.persson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Miller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Miller
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Miller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew McGill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew McGill
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew McGill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Goethals André
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Goethals André
Belgium

Note: Goethals André sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hoang Hoang pham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hoang Hoang pham
Denmark

Note: Hoang Hoang pham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter W
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter W
United Kingdom

Note: Peter W sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Loveday Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Loveday Smith
Netherlands

Note: Loveday Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: George Gagaras
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

George Gagaras
Greece

—

Note: George Gagaras sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Tsangarides
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Tsangarides
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Tsangarides sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: karine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

karine
France

—

Note: karine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: NMorris-VIVA Europa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

NMorris-VIVA Europa
United Kingdom

Note: NMorris-VIVA Europa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anderz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anderz
Norway

Note: Anderz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kevin Carroll
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kevin Carroll
United Kingdom

Note: Kevin Carroll sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roy Chopping
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roy Chopping
United Kingdom

Note: Roy Chopping sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Priscilla Gallou
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Priscilla Gallou
France

Note: Priscilla Gallou sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne
United Kingdom

Note: Anne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bo Sonnsjö
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bo Sonnsjö
Sweden

Note: Bo Sonnsjö sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joost kelderman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joost kelderman
Netherlands

Note: Joost kelderman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marie Ronnegård
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marie Ronnegård
Sweden

Note: Marie Ronnegård sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tara
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tara
Netherlands

Note: Tara sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fiona Lund
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fiona Lund
United Kingdom

Note: Fiona Lund sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J.Scringer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J Scrimger
United Kingdom

Note: J Scrimger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rex Harpham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rex Harpham

United Kingdom Great Britain

Note: Rex Harpham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerard Finnegan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerard Finnegan
United Kingdom

Note: Gerard Finnegan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Morten Christensen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

With strong pointers to the rising antipathy towards EU and the European legislators, I strongly urge you to oppose the big telecompanies, and enforce strong regulations for net-neutrality.

In a world chafing at the pace we are facing now, the free availability of information is as vital as never before. If we are still to believe, that the EU is a democratic union, and not just an economic union for the richest, we have to have free and equal access to a information.

Sincerely,
Morten L. Christensen
Concerned European

Below is the standard text, as this is a response to a campaign.
Thank you for listening.

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Morten Christensen
Denmark

Note: Morten Christensen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Liz Leicester
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Liz Leicester
United Kingdom

Note: Liz Leicester sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: justin coughlan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

justin coughlan
United Kingdom

Note: justin coughlan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Göran Maconi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Göran Maconi
Finland

Note: Göran Maconi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joy Keast
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joy Keast
United Kingdom

Note: Joy Keast sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Luke Moore
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Luke Moore
United Kingdom

Note: Luke Moore sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Derek Johnston
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Derek Johnston
United Kingdom

Note: Derek Johnston sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Ridgway
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'wide, fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'narrow, slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements (otherwise known as taxpayers) like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as censors and gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Whilst still am EU citizen, I would like my opinion here to be counted.

--

Martin Ridgway
United Kingdom

Note: Martin Ridgway sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bryn Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bryn Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Bryn Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roeland van der Vliet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roeland van der Vliet
Netherlands

Note: Roeland van der Vliet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria
United Kingdom

Note: Maria sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leduca
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leduca
Belgium

Note: Leduca sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marko Pausio
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marko Pausio
Finland

Note: Marko Pausio sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria-Christina Taylor-East
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria-Christina Taylor-East
Malta

—

Note: Maria-Christina Taylor-East sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: alfred_seguna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

alfred seguna
Malta

Note: alfred seguna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Mcilveen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Mcilveen
United Kingdom

Note: John Mcilveen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Harley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Harley
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Harley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas
Swaziland

Note: Thomas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Jarvis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Jarvis
France

—

Note: Peter Jarvis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matthew Beedle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matthew Beedle
Malta

Note: Matthew Beedle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jessica Elaine Kendrick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jessica Elaine Kendrick
United Kingdom

Note: Jessica Elaine Kendrick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Meera Ormea
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Meera Ormea
Italy

Note: Meera Ormea sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sheila Hannan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sheila Hannan
United Kingdom

Note: Sheila Hannan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Josephine Sharp
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Josephine Sharp
United Kingdom

Note: Josephine Sharp sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Platts-Hughes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Platts-Hughes
United Kingdom

Note: Anna Platts-Hughes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: keith swift
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

keith swift
United Kingdom

Note: keith swift sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kevin Frowein
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kevin Frowein
United Kingdom

Note: Kevin Frowein sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linda Nadolny
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linda Nadolny
United Kingdom

Note: Linda Nadolny sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leah
Spain

Note: Leah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: maarten.logghe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

maarten logghe
Belgium

Note: maarten logghe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Giulia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Giulia
Italy

Note: Giulia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susannah Everington
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thank you.
Susannah Everington
United Kingdom

Note: Susannah Everington sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Teresa Bliss
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Teresa Bliss
United Kingdom

Note: Teresa Bliss sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Johannes Cortoos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Johannes Cortoos
Belgium

—

Note: Johannes Cortoos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fergus Early
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fergus Early
UK

—

Note: Fergus Early sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simon Greener
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simon Greener
United Kingdom

Note: Simon Greener sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Conor Ryan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Conor Ryan
Ireland

Note: Conor Ryan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michél Murawa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michél Murawa
Germany

Note: Michél Murawa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick Cumber
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick Cumber
United Kingdom

Note: Nick Cumber sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joy
United Kingdom

Note: Joy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Michael Burns
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Michael Burns
United Kingdom

Note: John Michael Burns sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Broniek Boszczyk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Broniek Boszczyk
United Kingdom

Note: Broniek Boszczyk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Petr Burger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Petr Burger
Czech Republic

Note: Petr Burger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Meaux karine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Meaux karine
France

—

Note: Meaux karine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vandenberghe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vandenberghe
France

—

Note: Vandenberghe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexander Jones Nash
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexander Jones Nash
United Kingdom

Note: Alexander Jones Nash sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aled Rees
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aled Rees
United Kingdom

Note: Aled Rees sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chetan Rama
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chetan Rama
United Kingdom

Note: Chetan Rama sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Haris Jusufhodzic
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Haris Jusufhodzic
Austria

Note: Haris Jusufhodzic sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane Darling
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane Darling
United Kingdom

Note: Jane Darling sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tilly Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tilly Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Tilly Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christian Schwarz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christian Schwarz
Germany

Note: Christian Schwarz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jes Holm
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jes Holm
Denmark

Note: Jes Holm sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angie Risso
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angie Risso
Gibraltar

Note: Angie Risso sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Furber
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Furber
United Kingdom

Note: Steve Furber sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen Jack
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen Jack
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen Jack sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Trust
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Trust
United Kingdom

Note: Trust sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Raza
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Raza
United Kingdom

Note: Raza sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Teresa Clarke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Teresa Clarke
United Kingdom

Note: Teresa Clarke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tatiana
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tatiana
Cyprus

Note: Tatiana sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Corfield
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Corfield
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Corfield sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shadow Maidment
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shadow Maidment
United States of America

Note: Shadow Maidment sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fiona Stuart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fiona Stuart
United Kingdom

Note: Fiona Stuart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: flora
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

flora
United Kingdom

Note: flora sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Laura Räsänen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Laura Räsänen
Finland

Note: Laura Räsänen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julie Harrison
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julie Harrison
United Kingdom

Note: Julie Harrison sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katrina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Katrina
United Kingdom

Note: Katrina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: judithlibbey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

judithlibbey
United Kingdom

Note: judithlibbey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ALAN DEAN
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ALAN DEAN
United Kingdom

Note: ALAN DEAN sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen Lukander
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen Lukander
Finland

—

Note: Karen Lukander sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marie Priest
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marie Priest
United Kingdom

Note: Marie Priest sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marya Mahony
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marya Mahony
United Kingdom

Note: Marya Mahony sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Crossley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Crossley
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Crossley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: paul_wedlock
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

paul wedlock
United Kingdom

Note: paul wedlock sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: simon brooks
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

simon brooks
United Kingdom

Note: simon brooks sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rebecca Anderson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Keeping the Internet accessible to all is important and essential for the human race to progress in a humane, caring, uniting, fair way. Restrictions and fees imposed by anyone is against this and is motivated purely by selfish, monetary greed.

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rebecca Anderson
United Kingdom

Note: Rebecca Anderson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane Huyg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane Huyg
United Kingdom

Note: Jane Huyg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John & Judith Richardson-Dawes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John & Judith Richardson-Dawes
United Kingdom

Note: John & Judith Richardson-Dawes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: cathy roberts
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

cathy roberts
United Kingdom

Note: cathy roberts sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Giacomo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Giacomo
South Africa

Note: Giacomo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pete
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pete
Ireland

—

Note: Pete sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sheila.edwards
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sheila edwards
United Kingdom

Note: sheila edwards sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frank
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frank
United Kingdom

Note: Frank sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vitor Alexandre Nunes Pereira
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vitor Alexandre Nunes Pereira
Portugal

Note: Vitor Alexandre Nunes Pereira sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Al Shields
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Al Shields
United Kingdom

Note: Al Shields sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

I doubt that the corporate takeover of the internet was what Tim Berners-Lee had in mind when he created the World Wide Web.

--

Maria
Ireland

Note: Maria sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr. Godfrey Gauci Maistre
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr. Godfrey Gauci Maistre
Malta

Note: Dr. Godfrey Gauci Maistre sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ZOI LIANOU
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ZOI LIANOU
Greece

Note: ZOI LIANOU sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Séamus Ó Tuama
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Séamus Ó Tuama
Israel

—

Note: Séamus Ó Tuama sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Søren Bisgård
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Søren Bisgård
Denmark

Note: Søren Bisgård sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Micke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Micke
Sweden

Note: Micke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hélène Berthe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hélène Berthe
France

Note: Hélène Berthe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bibbi Jansson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bibbi Jansson
Sweden

Note: Bibbi Jansson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roy Isbister
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roy Isbister
United Kingdom

Note: Roy Isbister sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Dobbs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Dobbs
Spain

—

Note: Michael Dobbs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gintare Eiglaite
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gintare Eiglaite
United Kingdom

Note: Gintare Eiglaite sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nik
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nik
Greece

—

Note: Nik sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kay Lafford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kay Lafford
United Kingdom

Note: Kay Lafford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Hughes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>.

Don't let Tim Berners-smith down - he GAVE his creation to us all. No-one has a right to limit it.

--

Anna Hughes
United Kingdom

Note: Anna Hughes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: spink floyd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

spink floyd
United Kingdom

Note: spink floyd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pascal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pascal
Netherlands

Note: Pascal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joanna Serraris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joanna Serraris
Netherlands

Note: Joanna Serraris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John McNicholas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John McNicholas
Ireland

Note: John McNicholas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony Stansfield
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony Stansfield
France

Note: Tony Stansfield sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: will murray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

will murray
United Kingdom

Note: will murray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shirin Patel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shirin Patel
United Kingdom

Note: Shirin Patel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ali Dehghan-Nayeri
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ali Dehghan-Nayeri
United Kingdom

Note: Ali Dehghan-Nayeri sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Harry Towne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Harry Towne
Costa Rica

Note: Harry Towne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hannu Eerikäinen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hannu Eerikäinen
Germany

Note: Hannu Eerikäinen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christoph Sarasin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christoph Sarasin
Finland

Note: Christoph Sarasin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Hopps
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Hopps
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Hopps sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linda Brant
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linda Brant
United Kingdom

Note: Linda Brant sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stan Annis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stan Annis
United Kingdom

Note: Stan Annis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Terry lewis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Terry lewis
United Kingdom

Note: Terry lewis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Stokes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Stokes
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Stokes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paula Jantunen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paula Jantunen
Italy

Note: Paula Jantunen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simon Phillippo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simon Phillippo
United Kingdom

Note: Simon Phillippo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen Stone
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helen Stone
United Kingdom

Note: Helen Stone sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lies Boelen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lies Boelen
United Kingdom

Note: Lies Boelen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Foss
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Foss
Germany

Note: Peter Foss sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: yannick verhaegen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

yannick verhaegen
Belgium

Note: yannick verhaegen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michail P. Melas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michail P. Melas
Greece

—

Note: Michail P. Melas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alison
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alison
United Kingdom

Note: Alison sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A.Rhymes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

A.Rhymes
United Kingdom

Note: A.Rhymes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Victoria Evans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Victoria Evans
United Kingdom

Note: Victoria Evans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Niamh ferguson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Niamh ferguson
United Kingdom

Note: Niamh ferguson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Buss
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Buss
United Kingdom

Note: David Buss sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dan Leathers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.

If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'.

This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.

I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.

In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dan Leathers Leathers
UK

Note: Dan Leathers Leathers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bert
Netherlands

Note: Bert sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Graeme
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Graeme
United Kingdom

Note: Graeme sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Charij
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Charij
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Charij sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robin Kitson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robin Kitson
United Kingdom

Note: Robin Kitson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Boris Kuren
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Boris Kuren
Slovenia

Note: Boris Kuren sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Norman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please, please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Norman
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Norman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kevin Bryanton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kevin Bryanton
United Kingdom

Note: Kevin Bryanton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Claudia Mayer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Claudia Mayer
Germany

Note: Claudia Mayer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margaret Boland
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margaret Boland
United Kingdom

Note: Margaret Boland sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Victoria Friend
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Victoria Friend
United Kingdom

Note: Victoria Friend sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicole
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicole
Denmark

Note: Nicole sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dorte Møller Pedersen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dorte Møller Pedersen
Denmark

Note: Dorte Møller Pedersen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kirsty P
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kirsty P
United Kingdom

Note: Kirsty P sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen Watts
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen Watts
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen Watts sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: kenneth barham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

kenneth barham
United Kingdom

Note: kenneth barham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lucas CI
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lucas CI
Germany

Note: Lucas CI sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen Taylor
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vasil
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vasil
Bulgaria

Note: Vasil sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Donald Atkinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Donald Atkinson
United Kingdom

Note: Donald Atkinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Effanga
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Effanga
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Effanga sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: lucas_persson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

lucas persson
Sweden

Note: lucas persson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M. Koenen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M. Koenen
Netherlands

Note: M. Koenen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: AHTI-VEIKKO PIETARINEN
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

AHTI-VEIKKO PIETARINEN
Finland

Note: AHTI-VEIKKO PIETARINEN sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Harry Versluijs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Harry Versluijs
Netherlands

Note: Harry Versluijs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pauline
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pauline
Germany

—

Note: Pauline sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martijn de Coster
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martijn de Coster
Netherlands

Note: Martijn de Coster sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patrick campbell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patrick campbell
United Kingdom

Note: Patrick campbell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alison Freeman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

I am very concerned about making sure data and information is equally and freely available so that we can find and access information that gives us a real representation of the world, not just a perspective shaped by power and capital.

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alison Freeman
United Kingdom

Note: Alison Freeman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ellen Laird
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ellen Laird
United Kingdom

Note: Ellen Laird sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonathan Slaatto
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonathan Slaatto
Denmark

From: Mehmet Yamanlar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mehmet Yamanlar
Sweden

Note: Mehmet Yamanlar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Craig Gordon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Craig Gordon
Spain

Note: Craig Gordon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Irma Lakatos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Irma Lakatos
Hungary

Note: Irma Lakatos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alzbeta
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alzbeta
Slovakia

Note: Alzbeta sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter De Boeck
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter De Boeck
Belgium

Note: Peter De Boeck sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas Bredsdorff
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas Bredsdorff
Denmark

Note: Thomas Bredsdorff sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: beata
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

beata
United Kingdom

Note: beata sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mr Malachai Hickman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mr Malachai Hickman
United Kingdom

Note: Mr Malachai Hickman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick Molteno
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick Molteno
United Kingdom

Note: Nick Molteno sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sean Potter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sean Potter
Portugal

Note: Sean Potter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kevin Ward
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kevin Ward
United Kingdom

Note: Kevin Ward sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Gravell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Gravell
United Kingdom

Note: John Gravell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Polly Brown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Polly Brown
United Kingdom

Note: Polly Brown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nathan Donaldson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nathan Donaldson
United Kingdom

Note: Nathan Donaldson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Colleen L Maughan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Colleen L Maughan
United Kingdom

Note: Colleen L Maughan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Claire Rigby
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Note: Claire Rigby sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Benjamin Brinckmann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Benjamin Brinckmann
Netherlands

Note: Benjamin Brinckmann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gabriella Ujhelyi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gabriella Ujhelyi
United Kingdom

Note: Gabriella Ujhelyi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: adriana_strakova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

adriana strakova
United Kingdom

Note: adriana strakova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jenny
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jenny
United Kingdom

Note: Jenny sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Duncan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Duncan
Germany

Note: Duncan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sonia Maria Canino González
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sonia Maria Canino González
Spain

—

Note: Sonia Maria Canino González sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philip
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philip
United Kingdom

Note: Philip sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Murphy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Murphy
United Kingdom

Note: Brian Murphy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: H. Miller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

H. Miller
United Kingdom

Note: H. Miller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: brian
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

brian
Ireland

—

Note: brian sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jon evans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jon evans
United Kingdom

Note: Jon evans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katrin Targo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Thank you.

--

Katrin Targo
Estonia

Note: Katrin Targo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: L. Vorrink
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

L. Vorrink
Netherlands

Note: L. Vorrink sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vera Wellens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vera Wellens
Belgium

Note: Vera Wellens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philip Deegan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philip Deegan
United Kingdom

Note: Philip Deegan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daumantas Vladarskis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daumantas Vladarskis
United Kingdom

Note: Daumantas Vladarskis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hilly Longman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hilly Longman
United Kingdom

Note: Hilly Longman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: philip craig
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

philip craig
United Kingdom

Note: philip craig sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: helen silman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

helen silman
United Kingdom

Note: helen silman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alejandro Gómez Yepes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alejandro Gómez Yepes
Spain

Note: Alejandro Gómez Yepes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Rhodes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Rhodes
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Rhodes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonathan Eastmond
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonathan Eastmond
United Kingdom

Note: Jonathan Eastmond sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jon francis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jon francis
Greece

—

Note: Jon francis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tilly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tilly
France

—

Note: Tilly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel
Italy

Note: Daniel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M storey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M storey
United Kingdom

Note: M storey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Guest
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Guest
United Kingdom

Note: John Guest sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Grundy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Grundy
United Kingdom

Note: John Grundy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mergit Roivas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mergit Roivas
Finland

Note: Mergit Roivas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Clair Bel-Maguire
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Clair Bel-Maguire
Ireland

Note: Clair Bel-Maguire sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: j pinches
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

j pinches
United Kingdom

Note: j pinches sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: D Place
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

D Place
United Kingdom

Note: D Place sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Morton Harper
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Morton Harper
United Kingdom

Note: Morton Harper sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Allin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Allin
Ireland

—

Note: Steve Allin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alice Kovic
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alice Kovic
Slovenia

Note: Alice Kovic sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul price
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul price
United Kingdom

Note: Paul price sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Lewis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Lewis
United Kingdom

Note: James Lewis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patrick Condon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patrick Condon
United Kingdom

Note: Patrick Condon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maire NicChormaic
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maire NicChormaic
Ireland

Note: Maire NicChormaic sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Niclas Sandström
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Niclas Sandström
Sweden

Note: Niclas Sandström sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sam Hedges
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sam Hedges
United Kingdom

Note: Sam Hedges sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Terry Long
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Terry Long
United Kingdom

Note: Terry Long sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ulf Wallentin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ulf Wallentin
Sweden

Note: Ulf Wallentin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Manya
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Manya
United Kingdom

Note: Manya sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Olivia Outred
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Olivia Outred
United Kingdom

Note: Olivia Outred sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Louise Macphaol
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Louise Macphaol
United Kingdom

Note: Louise Macphaol sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stefano
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stefano
Italy

Note: Stefano sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christopher Coulson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christopher Coulson
UK

—

Note: [Christopher Coulson] sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Msry mcbride
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Msry mcbride
Ireland

Note: Msry mcbride sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jerzy Kubis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jerzy Kubis
Poland

Note: Jerzy Kubis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexander Hausch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexander Hausch
Austria

Note: Alexander Hausch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kevin Erhard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kevin Erhard
Denmark

Note: Kevin Erhard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: hendrik
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

hendrik
Germany

—

Note: hendrik sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Laurie Bantin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Laurie Bantin
United Kingdom

Note: Laurie Bantin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Claire Ash Wheeler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Claire Ash Wheeler
United Kingdom

Note: Claire Ash Wheeler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonathan Date
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonathan Date
Germany

Note: Jonathan Date sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lars Leiteritz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lars Leiteritz
Germany

Note: Lars Leiteritz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Watkins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Watkins
UK

—

Note: Chris Watkins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eike Jäger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eike Jäger
Germany

Note: Eike Jäger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Валери Арабаджиев
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Валери Арабаджиев
Bulgaria

Note: Валери Арабаджиев sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alison Long
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alison Long
United Kingdom

Note: Alison Long sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amy Bragginton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amy Bragginton
United Kingdom

Note: Amy Bragginton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hensler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hensler
Switzerland

Note: Hensler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jennifer Levy Halford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jennifer Levy Halford
United Kingdom

Note: Jennifer Levy Halford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sost nicolas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sost nicolas
France

—

Note: Sost nicolas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ribke Wolfgang
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ribke Wolfgang
Germany

Note: Ribke Wolfgang sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel Cauchi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel Cauchi
United Kingdom

Note: Daniel Cauchi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Phil Paige
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Phil Paige
United Kingdom

Note: Phil Paige sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Preston
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Preston
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Preston sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Stewardson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Stewardson
United Kingdom

Note: Anne Stewardson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Derek Murphy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Derek Murphy
Ireland

Note: Derek Murphy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Judith Wills
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Judith Wills
United Kingdom

Note: Judith Wills sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linda Buckland
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linda Buckland
United Kingdom

Note: Linda Buckland sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ana Lourenco
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ana Lourenço
Portugal

Note: Ana Lourenço sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephanie Strong
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Thanks in advance for your consideration.

Kind regards
Stephanie Strong
United Kingdom

Note: Stephanie Strong sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarah Brown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarah Brown
United Kingdom

Note: Sarah Brown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: dave
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

dave
United Kingdom

Note: dave sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Omega
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Omega
United Kingdom

Note: Omega sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tuur Hermans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tuur Hermans
Belgium

Note: Tuur Hermans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sharon Donadoni
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sharon Donadoni
United Kingdom

Note: Sharon Donadoni sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria
Slovakia

Note: Maria sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: MOIRA Govan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

MOIRA Govan
United Kingdom

Note: MOIRA Govan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Harald Sterner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Harald Sterner
Sweden

Note: Harald Sterner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lucy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lucy
United Kingdom

Note: Lucy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kirsten Gibbs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kirsten Gibbs
United Kingdom

Note: Kirsten Gibbs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lionel Stoodley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lionel Stoodley
United Kingdom

Note: Lionel Stoodley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stefan Streicher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stefan Streicher
Germany

Note: Stefan Streicher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bas timmers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bas timmers
Netherlands

Note: Bas timmers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Darth Tony Thollin Phonesouk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Darth Tony Thollin Phonesouk
Sweden

Note: Darth Tony Thollin Phonesouk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Diane Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Diane Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Diane Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger Colkett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger Colkett
United Kingdom

Note: Roger Colkett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Deb Shaw
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Deb Shaw
United Kingdom

Note: Deb Shaw sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Douwe van Terwisga
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Douwe van Terwisga
Netherlands

Note: Douwe van Terwisga sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Naisbitt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Naisbitt
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Naisbitt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Green
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Green
United Kingdom

Note: Steve Green sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wenche Holm Stenhjem
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wenche Holm Stenhjem
Norway

Note: Wenche Holm Stenhjem sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lars Borgström
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lars Borgström
Sweden

Note: Lars Borgström sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jeanette Critien
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jeanette Critien
Malta

—

Note: Jeanette Critien sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chanelle Hill-Dobson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chanelle Hill-Dobson
United Kingdom

Note: Chanelle Hill-Dobson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sam luxton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sam luxton
United Kingdom

Note: sam luxton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John D Anderson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John D Anderson
United Kingdom

Note: John D Anderson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Themah Carolle-Casey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Themah Carolle-Casey
United Kingdom

Note: Themah Carolle-Casey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leena Rahja
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leena Rahja
Finland

Note: Leena Rahja sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Liisa Rantalaiho
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Liisa Rantalaiho
Finland

Note: Liisa Rantalaiho sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marinescu Sergiu
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marinescu Sergiu
Romania

Note: Marinescu Sergiu sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Colin Gregg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Colin Gregg
United Kingdom

Note: Colin Gregg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: glym morris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

glym morris
United Kingdom

Note: glym morris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rune Bivrin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rune Bivrin
Sweden

Note: Rune Bivrin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Benoit Charlet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Benoit Charlet
Belgium

Note: Benoit Charlet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tiziana Salvi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tiziana Salvi
Italy

Note: Tiziana Salvi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerard Brennan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerard Brennan
United Kingdom

Note: Gerard Brennan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Petr Golich
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Petr Golich
Czech Republic

Note: Petr Golich sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: C.Zettelmeier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

C.Zettelmeier
Germany

Note: C.Zettelmeier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: heidi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

heidi
United Kingdom

Note: heidi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maureen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maureen
United Kingdom

Note: Maureen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen
United Kingdom

Note: Karen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane Russell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane Russell
United Kingdom

Note: Jane Russell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robin Brown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robin Brown
United Kingdom

Note: Robin Brown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bridget Ambrose
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bridget Ambrose
United Kingdom

Note: Bridget Ambrose sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janet King
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janet King
United Kingdom

Note: Janet King sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amanda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amanda
France

Note: Amanda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Boyle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Boyle
United Kingdom

Note: David Boyle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sandra Yarwood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sandra Yarwood
United Kingdom

Note: Sandra Yarwood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: elaine.currie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

elaine currie
United Kingdom

Note: elaine currie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jeroen Bartels
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jeroen Bartels
Netherlands

Note: Jeroen Bartels sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sally Allen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sally Allen
United Kingdom

Note: Sally Allen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Heather
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Heather
United Kingdom

Note: Heather sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Hutchinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Hutchinson
United Kingdom

Note: John Hutchinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: geoff kragt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

geoff kragt
United Kingdom

Note: geoff kragt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Johanna Frei
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Johanna Frei
Austria

Note: Johanna Frei sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For these reasons, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian
Ireland

From: Dagan Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition, creativity and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.
- The internet should be seen as a basic human right; in terms of communication and connectivity.

There is no place for multi-national corporations to try and start sinking their paws in to the free and open internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dagan Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Dagan Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christopher Gray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christopher Gray
Spain

—

Note: Christopher Gray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Phil Scott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Phil Scott
United Kingdom

Note: Phil Scott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matt
Portugal

Note: Matt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Bower
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Bower
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Bower sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: shabana bashir
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

shabana bashir
United Kingdom

Note: shabana bashir sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Geoff Robbins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Geoff Robbins
United Kingdom

Note: Geoff Robbins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Malcolm Hogarth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Malcolm Hogarth
United Kingdom

Note: Malcolm Hogarth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Walker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Walker
United Kingdom

Note: David Walker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tom Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tom Taylor
United Kingdom

Note: Tom Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janis
Latvia

—

Note: Janis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: António Almeida
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sirs,

Should you succeed, the only option left for developed societies is revolt. Look no further than the Arab Spring. People entertain each other now, not the mass media.

--

António Almeida
Portugal

Note: António Almeida sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lucy Healey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lucy Healey
United Kingdom

Note: Lucy Healey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gridi Serbo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gridi Serbo
Netherlands

Note: Gridi Serbo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan
United Kingdom

Note: Susan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: koumrouyan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

koumrouyan
France

—

Note: koumrouyan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James
United Kingdom

Note: James sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kirsty
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kirsty
United Kingdom

Note: Kirsty sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stuart McDonald
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stuart McDonald
United Kingdom

Note: Stuart McDonald sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tom Graham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tom Graham
United Kingdom

Note: Tom Graham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Casper Ulsoe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Casper Ulsoe
Denmark

Note: Casper Ulsoe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Armstrong
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Armstrong
France

Note: Christine Armstrong sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Forrest
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Forrest
United Kingdom

Note: Steve Forrest sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lis Harris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lis Harris
United Kingdom

Note: Lis Harris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: End
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

End
Netherlands

—

Note: End sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gordon Jukes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gordon Jukes
United Kingdom

Note: Gordon Jukes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Evie Efthimiou
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Evie Efthimiou
United Kingdom

Note: Evie Efthimiou sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Clive Williams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Clive Williams
United Kingdom

Note: Clive Williams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Giuseppe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Giuseppe
United Kingdom

Note: James Giuseppe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrea Ingram
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrea Ingram
Germany

Note: Andrea Ingram sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Torsten Wönicker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Torsten Wönicker
Netherlands

Note: Torsten Wönicker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jordan Wiley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jordan Wiley
United Kingdom

Note: Jordan Wiley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dorota Miklasinska
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dorota Miklasinska
United Kingdom

Note: Dorota Miklasinska sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Stobart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Stobart
United Kingdom

Note: Anna Stobart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sarah_orchard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sarah orchard
United Kingdom

Note: sarah orchard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aristotelis Folas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aristotelis Folas
Greece

Note: Aristotelis Folas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Judit
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

DO NOT BLOCK OUR WAY TO THE FUTURE!!!

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Judit
Hungary

Note: Judit sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Derek Scanlan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Derek Scanlan
Ireland

—

Note: Derek Scanlan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Suzanne Duffour
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Suzanne Duffour
Sweden

Note: Suzanne Duffour sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen Lawrence
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helen Lawrence
United Kingdom

Note: Helen Lawrence sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony
Ireland

—

Note: Tony sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex
Ireland

—

Note: Alex sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elisabeth Ziller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elisabeth Ziller
Luxembourg

Note: Elisabeth Ziller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J.C.Bevereidge
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J.C.Bevereidge
United Kingdom

Note: J.C.Bevereidge sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tamzin Bloomfield
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tamzin Bloomfield
United Kingdom

Note: Tamzin Bloomfield sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Snders Estelle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Snders Estelle
Belgium

Note: Snders Estelle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonathan Clarke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonathan Clarke
United Kingdom

Note: Jonathan Clarke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Johnson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Johnson
United Kingdom

Note: David Johnson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Péter Kárász
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Péter Kárász
Hungary

Note: Péter Kárász sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Melanie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Melanie
United Kingdom

Note: Melanie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stefanie Bruns
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stefanie Bruns
Portugal

Note: Stefanie Bruns sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aad
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aad
Netherlands

Note: Aad sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Geoff Davis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Geoff Davis
United Kingdom

Note: Geoff Davis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paula Rylatt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paula Rylatt
United Kingdom

Note: Paula Rylatt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Liisa Koemets
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Liisa Koemets
Estonia

Note: Liisa Koemets sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ana gonzalez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ana gonzalez
United Kingdom

Note: ana gonzalez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Menard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Menard
France

—

Note: Menard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bill Yates
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bill Yates
United Kingdom

Note: Bill Yates sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maureen Hart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maureen Hart
United Kingdom

Note: Maureen Hart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ina Lukl
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ina Lukl
Austria

Note: Ina Lukl sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexander Howard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexander Howard
United Kingdom

Note: Alexander Howard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Šlauka
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Šlauka
Slovakia

Note: Martin Šlauka sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Reisz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Reisz
United Kingdom

Note: James Reisz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kimmo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kimmo
Finland

Note: Kimmo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Liguori
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Liguori
Italy

Note: Liguori sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brett Sloman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brett Sloman
United Kingdom

Note: Brett Sloman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Colette Harris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Colette Harris
United Kingdom

Note: Colette Harris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matthias Winter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matthias Winter
Germany

Note: Matthias Winter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Santiago Hermida
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Santiago Hermida
Portugal

Note: Santiago Hermida sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin de Roode
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas de Roode
Netherlands

Note: Thomas de Roode sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonathan Andrew Gobbett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonathan Andrew Gobbett
United Kingdom

Note: Jonathan Andrew Gobbett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: SARAH ROSE
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

SARAH ROSE
United Kingdom

Note: SARAH ROSE sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shpresa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shpresa
Sweden

Note: Shpresa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pamella Campbell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pamella Campbell
United Kingdom

Note: Pamella Campbell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel Spencer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel Spencer
United Kingdom

Note: Daniel Spencer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Froyen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Froyen
Belgium

Note: Robert Froyen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Teemu Kiiski
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Teemu Kiiski
Finland

Note: Teemu Kiiski sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: C.Walsh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

C Walsh
Netherlands

Note: C Walsh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Shah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Shah
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Shah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alister
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alister
United Kingdom

Note: Alister sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paula Clews
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paula Clews
United Kingdom

Note: Paula Clews sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Laakasuo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Laakasuo
Finland

Note: Michael Laakasuo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Negulescu
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Negulescu
Romania

Note: Robert Negulescu sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: roy.rudkin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

roy.rudkin
United Kingdom

Note: roy.rudkin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Filip Molski
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Filip Molski
Poland

—

Note: Filip Molski sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan
Germany

Note: Jan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: marisa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

marisa
Italy

Note: marisa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: rosemary_chalcraft
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

rosemary chalcraft
United Kingdom

Note: rosemary chalcraft sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miquela Faure
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miquela Faure
France

Note: Miquela Faure sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: roxana f
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please no more privileges for the already privileged!!!!!!

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

roxana f
United Kingdom

Note: roxana f sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Collins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Collins
United Kingdom

Note: John Collins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bill Linton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bill Linton
United Kingdom

Note: Bill Linton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jessi Tucker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jessi Tucker
United Kingdom

Note: Jessi Tucker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Camilo García
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Camilo García
Spain

Note: Camilo García sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jools
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jools
United Kingdom

Note: Jools sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sam Dodd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sam Dodd
United Kingdom

Note: Sam Dodd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Veitch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Veitch
United Kingdom

Note: John Veitch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amahl Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amahl Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Amahl Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Debs Burns
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Debs Burns
United Kingdom

Note: Debs Burns sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anastasia Angelova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anastasia Angelova
Bulgaria

Note: Anastasia Angelova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sam Franklin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sam Franklin
United Kingdom

Note: Sam Franklin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Viljar Sommerbakk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.

If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.

I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.

In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Viljar Sommerbakk
Sweden

—

Note: Viljar Sommerbakk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oscar Jigman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oscar Jigman
Sweden

Note: Oscar Jigman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ingvild
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ingvild
Denmark

Note: Ingvild sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Melinn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Melinn
Ireland

Note: John Melinn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick
United Kingdom

Note: Nick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vladimir
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vladimir
Andorra

Note: Vladimir sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: graham barrett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

graham barrett
Ireland

—

Note: graham barrett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stanislav Veselovsky
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stanislav Veselovsky
Czech Republic

Note: Stanislav Veselovsky sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: pat mills
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

pat mills
United Kingdom

Note: pat mills sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jefferson Parker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jefferson Parker
United Kingdom

Note: Jefferson Parker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: RICHARD GREEN
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

RICHARD GREEN
United Kingdom

Note: RICHARD GREEN sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carla Rodrigues
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carla Rodrigues
Portugal

Note: Carla Rodrigues sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tom
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tom
United Kingdom

Note: Tom sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pedro
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pedro
Portugal

Note: Pedro sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leo Baas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leo Baas
Sweden

Note: Leo Baas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Franco Fabbri
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Franco Fabbri
Italy

Note: Franco Fabbri sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Edmonds
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Edmonds
United Kingdom

Note: James Edmonds sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Max de Vroet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Max de Vroet
France

Note: Max de Vroet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jean pierre blanchard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jean pierre blanchard
United Kingdom

Note: jean pierre blanchard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kath Leeder
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kath Leeder
United Kingdom

Note: Kath Leeder sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fabian Meyer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fabian Meyer
Germany

—

Note: Fabian Meyer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julian Hall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julian Hall
United Kingdom

Note: Julian Hall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Athanaïos Rouchitsas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Athanaïos Rouchitsas
Greece

Note: Athanaïos Rouchitsas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: vishal karavadra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

vishal karavadra
United Kingdom

Note: vishal karavadra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dave
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dave
Netherlands

Note: Dave sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sofie van den ende
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sofie van den ende
Netherlands

Note: sofie van den ende sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Corinna Bautsch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Corinna Bautsch
Germany

Note: Corinna Bautsch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Metodi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Metodi
1309

—

Note: Metodi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Hegarty
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Hegarty
Canada

—

Note: Peter Hegarty sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Olim
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Olim
Netherlands

Note: Olim sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Samuel Dixon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Samuel Dixon
United Kingdom

Note: Samuel Dixon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Crews
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Crews
France

—

Note: David Crews sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Heather
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Heather
United Kingdom

Note: Heather sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lieven Tytgat
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lieven Tytgat
Belgium

Note: Lieven Tytgat sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Klaus Virtanen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Klaus Virtanen
Sweden

Note: Klaus Virtanen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lukas Adam
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lukas Adam
United Kingdom

Note: Lukas Adam sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: dan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

dan
Romania

—

Note: dan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cooke-Yarborough
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cooke-Yarborough
France

—

Note: Cooke-Yarborough sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: melissa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

melissa
Germany

—

Note: melissa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shane Priestley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shane Priestley
United Kingdom

Note: Shane Priestley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: chitoshi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

chitoshi
United Kingdom

Note: chitoshi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eimi smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eimi smith
Finland

Note: Eimi smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stella Mantzos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stella Mantzos
Greece

Note: Stella Mantzos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Danuta Ramos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Danuta Ramos
United Kingdom

Note: Danuta Ramos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Werner Eppinger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Werner Eppinger
Germany

Note: Werner Eppinger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bayeva Eλενη
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bayeva Eλενη
Ελλάδα

—

Note: Bayeva Eλενη sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Sampson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Martin Sampson
UK

—

Note: Martin Sampson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen Scott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen Scott
United Kingdom

Note: Karen Scott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sue Blanchard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sue Blanchard
United Kingdom

Note: Sue Blanchard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Pickard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Pickard
United Kingdom

Note: John Pickard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: joao
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

joao
Portugal

Note: joao sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Sere
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Sere
Germany

Note: David Sere sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eduard Ihnat
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eduard Ihnat
Slovakia

Note: Eduard Ihnat sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julio Irlles
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julio Irlles
Spain

Note: Julio Irlles sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Saskia van Kampen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Saskia van Kampen
The Netherlands

Note: Saskia van Kampen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Catherine Sullivan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Catherine Sullivan
United Kingdom

Note: Catherine Sullivan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karly Walters-Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karly Walters-Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Karly Walters-Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony
United Kingdom

Note: Tony sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: percy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

percy
United Kingdom

Note: percy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Catherine Elphick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Catherine Elphick
United Kingdom

Note: Catherine Elphick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carole
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carole
United Kingdom

Note: Carole sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Charlie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Charlie
United Kingdom

Note: Charlie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Manosh Misra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Manosh Misra
Germany

Note: Manosh Misra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kenneth Weston
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kenneth Weston
United Kingdom

Note: Kenneth Weston sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr. Egon Truebenbacher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr. Egon Truebenbacher
Germany

Note: Dr. Egon Truebenbacher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A Broomfield
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

A Broomfield
United Kingdom

Note: A Broomfield sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Klaus Schleuter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Klaus Schleuter
Netherlands

Note: Klaus Schleuter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarah Walkley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarah Walkley
United Kingdom

Note: Sarah Walkley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gustavo Beckmann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gustavo Beckmann
Germany

Note: Gustavo Beckmann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Ferris
United Kingdom

Note: John sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lorrayne Hill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lorrayne Hill
United Kingdom

Note: Lorrayne Hill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sam Tucker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sam Tucker
Ireland

Note: Sam Tucker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Baldur van Dongen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Baldur van Dongen
Netherlands

Note: Baldur van Dongen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lepelmann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ralf Lepelmann
Germany

—

Note: Ralf Lepelmann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Georgie Knight
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Georgie Knight
United Kingdom

Note: Georgie Knight sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Henry Swanzy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Henry Swanzy
United Kingdom

Note: Henry Swanzy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Varley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Varley
United Kingdom

Note: John Varley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pat Flowerday
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pat Flowerday
United Kingdom

Note: Pat Flowerday sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul
Ireland

—

Note: Paul sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tom
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tom
United Kingdom

Note: Tom sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tanja Grmovsek
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tanja Grmovsek
Slovenia

Note: Tanja Grmovsek sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Yuri Janssen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Yuri Janssen
Netherlands

Note: Yuri Janssen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Inger Eriksson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Inger Eriksson
Sweden

—

Note: Inger Eriksson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: JA van Arkel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

JA van Arkel
Netherlands

Note: JA van Arkel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: George Sims
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

George Sims
United Kingdom

Note: George Sims sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: mike
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

mike
United Kingdom

Note: mike sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pat Fawcett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pat Fawcett
United Kingdom

Note: Pat Fawcett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mikki Gaskell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mikki Gaskell
United Kingdom

Note: Mikki Gaskell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Harry Werber
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Harry Werber
United Kingdom

Note: Harry Werber sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Francesca
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Francesca
France

—

Note: Francesca sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matt Dunn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matt Dunn
United Kingdom

Note: Matt Dunn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Blyth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Blyth
United Kingdom

Note: John Blyth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marie Ericsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marie Ericsson
Sweden

Note: Marie Ericsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vesela Ivanova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vesela Ivanova
Bulgaria

Note: Vesela Ivanova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Chinnery
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Chinnery
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Chinnery sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel Remijn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel Remijn
Netherlands

Note: Daniel Remijn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dolores Dias-Gutteridge
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dolores Dias-Gutteridge
United Kingdom

Note: Dolores Dias-Gutteridge sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Schenkel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Schenkel
United Kingdom

Note: David Schenkel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Henrik Andersson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Henrik Andersson
Sweden

Note: Henrik Andersson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kate Phinn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kate Phinn
United Kingdom

Note: Kate Phinn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alicia Lööv
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alicia Lööv
Sweden

Note: Alicia Lööv sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Almina Isberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Almina Isberg
Sweden

Note: Almina Isberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen Stuart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen Stuart
United Kingdom

Note: Karen Stuart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger Williams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger Williams
United Kingdom

Note: Roger Williams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dyck Koen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dyck Koen
Belgium

Note: Dyck Koen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rui Lopes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rui Lopes
Portugal

Note: Rui Lopes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Charlie Williams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Charlie Williams
Ireland

Note: Charlie Williams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Boltze
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Boltze
Germany

Note: Michael Boltze sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Brown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Brown
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Brown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Lewis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Lewis
United Kingdom

Note: John Lewis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Howes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Howes
United Kingdom

Note: John Howes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shane Cook
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shane Cook
United Kingdom

Note: Shane Cook sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vincent
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vincent
United Kingdom

Note: Vincent sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Lightwing
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Lightwing
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Lightwing sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Howes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Howes
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew Howes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joost
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joost
Netherlands

Note: Joost sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Argueyrolles
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Argueyrolles
France

Note: Argueyrolles sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: JONATHAN MARKS
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

JONATHAN MARKS
United Kingdom

Note: JONATHAN MARKS sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Slater
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Slater
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Slater sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gareth O' Doherty
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gareth O' Doherty
United Kingdom

Note: Gareth O' Doherty sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexander Straker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexander Straker
United Kingdom

Note: Alexander Straker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Erica Goodwin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Erica Goodwin
United Kingdom

Note: Erica Goodwin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jo Rush
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jo Rush
United Kingdom

Note: Jo Rush sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Samuel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Samuel
Brazil

—

Note: Samuel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: silviu n
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

silviu n
Romania

Note: silviu n sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Davis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Davis
United Kingdom

Note: John Davis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Malin Tangen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Malin Tangen
Sweden

Note: Malin Tangen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Iris De Boeck
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Iris De Boeck
Belgium

Note: Iris De Boeck sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger
United Kingdom

Note: Roger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Burrow
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Burrow
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Burrow sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fredrik Bonnevier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fredrik Bonnevier
Sweden

Note: Fredrik Bonnevier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Skeels
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Skeels
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Skeels sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rachel Astall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rachel Astall
United Kingdom

Note: Rachel Astall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: henning.holmgren
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

henning holmgren
Sweden

—

Note: henning holmgren sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: mario.constantine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

mario constantine
United Kingdom

Note: mario constantine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Leach
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Leach
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Leach sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rauni Lillemets
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rauni Lillemets
Estonia

Note: Rauni Lillemets sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick Laurie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick Laurie
United Kingdom

Note: Nick Laurie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adam Watson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adam Watson
United Kingdom

Note: Adam Watson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: George Lansdown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

George Lansdown
United Kingdom

Note: George Lansdown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stan Duke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stan Duke
United Kingdom

Note: Stan Duke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Natasha Carstens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Natasha Carstens
Denmark

Note: Natasha Carstens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jeff leyshon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jeff leyshon
United Kingdom

Note: jeff leyshon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen Woodall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helen Woodall
United Kingdom

Note: Helen Woodall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marek Tichy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marek Tichy
Czech Republic

Note: Marek Tichy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Hopkins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Hopkins
United Kingdom

Note: David Hopkins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Roing
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Roing
Sweden

Note: Anna Roing sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James payne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James payne
United Kingdom

Note: James payne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sofia Lane
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sofia Lane
Finland

Note: Sofia Lane sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John
Ireland

—

Note: John sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Deblina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Deblina
United Kingdom

Note: Deblina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maverik Gately
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maverik Gately
United Kingdom

Note: Maverik Gately sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christina Färnström
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christina Färnström
Sweden

—

Note: Christina Färnström sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christian
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christian
Germany

Note: Christian sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tim Walker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tim Walker
United Kingdom

Note: Tim Walker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Georg Barth Magnus
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Georg Barth Magnus
Sweden

—

Note: Georg Barth Magnus sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julia Mink
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julia Mink
Hungary____

Note: Julia Mink sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Siddhi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Siddhi
United Kingdom

Note: Siddhi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Wells
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Wells
United Kingdom

Note: John Wells sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Burrows
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Burrows
United Kingdom

Note: David Burrows sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sean
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sean
Spain

—

Note: Sean sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robin Manoli
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robin Manoli
Sweden

Note: Robin Manoli sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rosendahl
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rosendahl
Germany

Note: Rosendahl sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brenda Dimbleby
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brenda Dimbleby
United Kingdom

Note: Brenda Dimbleby sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susanne Hegelund
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susanne Hegelund
Denmark

Note: Susanne Hegelund sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gary Tayor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gary Tayor
United Kingdom

Note: Gary Tayor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wolfgang Schneider
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wolfgang Schneider
Germany

Note: Wolfgang Schneider sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sergio Bango Sánchez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sergio Bango Sánchez
Spain

Note: Sergio Bango Sánchez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jordan Gatenby
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jordan Gatenby
United Kingdom

Note: Jordan Gatenby sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Lobar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Lobar
United Kingdom

Note: Jan Lobar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Beardon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--Anne Beardon
Anne Beardon
United Kingdom
___ England

Note: Anne Beardon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Moiz Girnary
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Moiz Girnary
United Kingdom

Note: Moiz Girnary sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: MO
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

MO
United Kingdom

Note: MO sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonathan Fifield
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonathan Fifield
United Kingdom

Note: Jonathan Fifield sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Antoine MOREL
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Antoine MOREL
France

Note: Antoine MOREL sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Manfred Scholz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Manfred Scholz
Netherlands

Note: Manfred Scholz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christopher Yeomans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christopher Yeomans
United Kingdom

Note: Christopher Yeomans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elise van Keulen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elise van Keulen
Netherlands

Note: Elise van Keulen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Cole
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Cole
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Cole sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Venla
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Venla
Finland

—

Note: Venla sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matt Zeal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matt Zeal
United Kingdom

Note: Matt Zeal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julia Seymour
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julia Seymour
United Kingdom

Note: Julia Seymour sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Juliet Highet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Juliet Highet
United Kingdom

Note: Juliet Highet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marc Geyskens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marc Geyskens
Belgium

Note: Marc Geyskens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Sealey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Sealey
United Kingdom

Note: John Sealey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rogier Weenen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rogier Weenen
Spain

—

Note: Rogier Weenen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr. Andreas Leistikow
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr. Andreas Leistikow
Germany

Note: Dr. Andreas Leistikow sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jiri Mrazek
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jiri Mrazek
Czech Republic

Note: Jiri Mrazek sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David hill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David hill
United Kingdom

Note: David hill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jakob Andersen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jakob Andersen
Denmark

Note: Jakob Andersen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Gaine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Gaine
United Kingdom

Note: Christine Gaine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vincent G. Bonnici
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vincent G. Bonnici
Malta

—

Note: Vincent G. Bonnici sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: blaz zerjav
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

blaz zerjav
Slovenia

Note: blaz zerjav sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julia Danajova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julia Danajova
Slovakia

Note: Julia Danajova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Hanson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Hanson
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Hanson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Worrall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Worrall
United Kingdom

Note: David Worrall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Albury
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Albury
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Albury sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hans Simon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hans Simon
Austria

Note: Hans Simon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: George Collinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

George Collinson
United Kingdom

Note: George Collinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Beverley Macdonald
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Beverley Macdonald
United Kingdom

Note: Beverley Macdonald sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerard Ambrose
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerard Ambrose
United Kingdom

Note: Gerard Ambrose sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Edward Mains
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Edward Mains
United Kingdom

Note: Edward Mains sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amanda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amanda Spearl
Greece

Note: Amanda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: marko kokkala
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

marko kokkala
Finland

Note: marko kokkala sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hanna Ljungblad
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hanna Ljungblad
Sweden

—

Note: Hanna Ljungblad sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vanisha
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vanisha
United Kingdom

Note: Vanisha sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stuart Woodward
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stuart Woodward
United Kingdom

Note: Stuart Woodward sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: meriel larken
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

meriel larken
United Kingdom

Note: meriel larken sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ricci Swärdenhem
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ricci Swärdenhem
Sweden

Note: Ricci Swärdenhem sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Higgins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Higgins
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew Higgins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Carpenter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Carpenter
United Kingdom

Note: Jan Carpenter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anno Mühlhoff
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anno Mühlhoff
Germany

Note: Anno Mühlhoff sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: João Cordeiro
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

João Cordeiro
Portugal

Note: João Cordeiro sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Hill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Hill
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Hill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julian Armstrong
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julian Armstrong
United Kingdom

Note: Julian Armstrong sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bob Penning
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bob Penning
United Kingdom

Note: Bob Penning sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark
United Kingdom

Note: Mark sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J Milne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J Milne
United Kingdom

Note: J Milne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sion
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sion
United Kingdom

Note: Sion sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ami Emanuel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ami Emanuel
Netherlands

Note: Ami Emanuel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: antonio
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

antonio
Portugal

—

Note: antonio sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jens boje Casupei
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jens boje Casupei
Denmark

Note: Jens boje Casupei sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katia Mullova-Brind
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Sincerely yours,

Katia Mullova-Brind

Note: Katia Mullova-Brind sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark
United Kingdom

Note: Mark sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marjeta
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marjeta
Slovenia

Note: Marjeta sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: E Doody
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

E Doody
United Kingdom

Note: E Doody sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A Szramko
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

A Szramko
United Kingdom

Note: A Szramko sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Evelina Fujisawa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Evelina Fujisawa
Germany

—

Note: Evelina Fujisawa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Hopkins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Hopkins
United Kingdom

Note: Anne Hopkins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dominique
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dominique
Belgium

Note: Dominique sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fiona Clark
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fiona Clark
United Kingdom

Note: Fiona Clark sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Myers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Myers
Ireland

Note: Peter Myers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: brian Rooney
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

brian Rooney
United Kingdom

Note: brian Rooney sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Niclas kuylenstierna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Niclas kuylenstierna
Sweden

Note: Niclas kuylenstierna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Graham Cordiner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Graham Cordiner
United Kingdom

Note: Graham Cordiner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Avis Mastin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Avis Mastin
United Kingdom

Note: Avis Mastin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barbara Haag
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barbara Haag
Austria

Note: Barbara Haag sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rhonda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rhonda
United Kingdom

Note: Rhonda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Benjamin Lloyd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Benjamin Lloyd
United Kingdom

Note: Benjamin Lloyd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Stark
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Stark
Finland

Note: John Stark sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linda Malenovská
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linda Malenovská
Czech Republic

Note: Linda Malenovská sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Geoffrey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Geoffrey
United Kingdom

Note: Geoffrey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: catherine.lott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

catherine lott
United Kingdom

Note: catherine lott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zoé
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zoé
France

—

Note: Zoé sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mathilda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mathilda
United Kingdom

Note: Mathilda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alison Crerar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alison Crerar
United Kingdom

Note: Alison Crerar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marco Sousa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marco Sousa
Portugal

Note: Marco Sousa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dorte Holm
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dorte Holm
Denmark

Note: Dorte Holm sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonathan Cook
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonathan Cook
United Kingdom

Note: Jonathan Cook sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Holm
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Holm
Sweden

Note: Peter Holm sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: bob jessop
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

bob jessop
United Kingdom

Note: bob jessop sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: neil Davidge
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

neil Davidge
United Kingdom

Note: neil Davidge sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kate Reece
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kate Reece
United Kingdom

Note: Kate Reece sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Louise Hichisson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Louise Hichisson
United Kingdom

Note: Louise Hichisson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mikael Willberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mikael Willberg
Denmark

Note: Mikael Willberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mary Watson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mary Watson
United Kingdom

Note: Mary Watson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A Guinguamp
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

A Guinguamp
United Kingdom

Note: A Guinguamp sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Glenn Moore
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Glenn Moore
United Kingdom

Note: Glenn Moore sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jon Dear
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jon Dear
UK

—

Note: Jon Dear sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philippe Herbomel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philippe Herbomel
France

Note: Philippe Herbomel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wiktoria
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wiktoria
Poland

Note: Wiktoria sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oliver Cabey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oliver Cabey
Ireland

—

Note: Oliver Cabey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mary Garbett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mary Garbett
United Kingdom

Note: Mary Garbett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Odet Aszkenasy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Odet Aszkenasy
United Kingdom

Note: Odet Aszkenasy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Madeleine Cook
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Madeleine Cook
United Kingdom

Note: Madeleine Cook sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin McCrae
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin McCrae
United Kingdom

Note: Martin McCrae sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Reddish
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Reddish
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Reddish sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carlo Wolter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carlo Wolter
Italy

—

Note: Carlo Wolter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anton
Netherlands

Note: Anton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aamyr hamid
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aamyr hamid
United Kingdom

Note: Aamyr hamid sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elizabeth Curtis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elizabeth Curtis
United Kingdom

Note: Elizabeth Curtis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Simpson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Simpson
United Kingdom

Note: Anne Simpson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Annette Faulkner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annette Faulkner
United Kingdom

Note: Annette Faulkner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: R. M. Van Den Houten
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

R. M. Van Den Houten
Netherlands

Note: R. M. Van Den Houten sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: annemare vanmidden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

annemare vanmidden
Netherlands

Note: annemare vanmidden sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matthew Pegg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matthew Pegg
United Kingdom

Note: Matthew Pegg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vitor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vitor
Portugal

Note: Vitor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicholas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicholas
United Kingdom

Note: Nicholas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jill Scott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jill Scott
United Kingdom

Note: Jill Scott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katie Allen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Katie Allen
United Kingdom

Note: Katie Allen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sandra Wiedemann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sandra Wiedemann
Germany

Note: Sandra Wiedemann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alistair Crow
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alistair Crow
United Kingdom

Note: Alistair Crow sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: P A Roberts
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

P A Roberts
United Kingdom

Note: P A Roberts sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kirsten Schauer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kirsten Schauer
Denmark

Note: Kirsten Schauer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Claudia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Claudia
United Kingdom

Note: Claudia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jean-Pierre Soudan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jean-Pierre Soudan
Belgium

Note: Jean-Pierre Soudan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Manuel Breul
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Manuel Breul
Germany

Note: Manuel Breul sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lia Opdam
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lia Opdam
Netherlands

Note: Lia Opdam sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paulo Ruivo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paulo Ruivo
Portugal

Note: Paulo Ruivo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Booker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Booker
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Booker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Constable
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Constable
United Kingdom

Note: Brian Constable sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carol Watchorn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carol Watchorn
United Kingdom

Note: Carol Watchorn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas Foley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas Foley
Ireland

Note: Thomas Foley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mats Bergsten
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mats Bergsten
Sweden

Note: Mats Bergsten sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marion Usher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marion Usher
United Kingdom

Note: Marion Usher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pedro Jose Toledo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pedro Jose Toledo
Spain

—

Note: Pedro Jose Toledo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chester Sands
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chester Sands
United Kingdom

Note: Chester Sands sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jacob Refsgaard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jacob Refsgaard
Danmark

Note: Jacob Refsgaard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Ridealgh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Ridealgh
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Ridealgh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bob Alderson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bob Alderson
United Kingdom

Note: Bob Alderson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carol Wheatley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carol Wheatley
United Kingdom

Note: Carol Wheatley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: gianna nicoletti
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

gianna nicoletti
Italy

—

Note: gianna nicoletti sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Foy Gibson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Foy Gibson
France

Note: Foy Gibson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tom Porcelijn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tom Porcelijn
Netherlands

Note: Tom Porcelijn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Detlef Rochow
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Detlef Rochow
Germany

Note: Detlef Rochow sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: V. Oliver
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

V. Oliver
France

—

Note: V. Oliver sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lena
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lena
Sweden

Note: Lena sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gill Wyse
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gill Wyse
United Kingdom

Note: Gill Wyse sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Heidi Mikkonen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Heidi Mikkonen
Finland

—

Note: Heidi Mikkonen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: tekla
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

tekla
Sweden

Note: tekla sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ANETTE HENNING
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ANETTE HENNING
Sweden

—

Note: ANETTE HENNING sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eva Portik
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eva Portik
Hungary

Note: Eva Portik sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ingrid Nilsson-Schutte
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ingrid Nilsson-Schutte
Sweden

Note: Ingrid Nilsson-Schutte sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Yvonna Plesnikova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Yvonna Plesnikova
United Kingdom

Note: Yvonna Plesnikova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: timothy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

timothy
United Kingdom

Note: timothy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nuno Pereira
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nuno Pereira
Portugal

Note: Nuno Pereira sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marcin Misiewicz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marcin Misiewicz
United Kingdom

Note: Marcin Misiewicz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Mills
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Mills
United Kingdom

Note: Anne Mills sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: john.macleod
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

john macleod
United Kingdom

Note: john macleod sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: N
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and iNovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick
United Kingdom

Note: Nick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elizabeth A Noon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elizabeth A Noon
United Kingdom

Note: Elizabeth A Noon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Clayton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Clayton
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Clayton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Pinto
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Pinto
United Kingdom

Note: David Pinto sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Quinton Scott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Quinton Scott
United Kingdom

Note: Quinton Scott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margaret
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margaret
United Kingdom

Note: Margaret sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mahesh Patil
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Many thanks
Mahesh Patil
London, United Kingdom

—

Note: Mahesh Patil sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex Sarll
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex Sarll
United Kingdom

Note: Alex Sarll sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: René van der Velde
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

René van der Velde
Netherlands

Note: René van der Velde sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ANDRAE DAVIES
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ANDRAE DAVIES
United Kingdom

Note: ANDRAE DAVIES sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Lockett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Lockett
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Lockett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emil
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emil
Sweden

Note: Emil sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Richardson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Richardson
United Kingdom

Note: John Richardson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Conyers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Conyers
United Kingdom

Note: Brian Conyers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Q. Couzijn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Q. Couzijn
Netherlands

Note: Q. Couzijn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Funnell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Funnell
United Kingdom

Note: John Funnell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jens Kastberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jens Kastberg
Spain

—

Note: Jens Kastberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Williams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Williams
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Williams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Saskia Wieberdink
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Saskia Wieberdink
Netherlands

Note: Saskia Wieberdink sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ben Kench
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ben Kench
United Kingdom

Note: Ben Kench sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hérouan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hérouan
Switzerland

Note: Hérouan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elsa Bartley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elsa Bartley
United Kingdom

Note: Elsa Bartley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helena Dahlgren
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helena Dahlgren
Sweden

Note: Helena Dahlgren sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Wagner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Wagner
Germany

Note: Mark Wagner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria
Greece

Note: Maria sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael
France

—

Note: Michael sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Graham Wood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Graham Wood
United Kingdom

Note: Graham Wood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lewis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lewis
United Kingdom

Note: Lewis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jodie brougham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jodie brougham
United Kingdom

Note: Jodie brougham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patrick Brogie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patrick Brogie
Germany

Note: Patrick Brogie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linda Malthouse
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linda Malthouse
United Kingdom

Note: Linda Malthouse sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: celia.middlemiss
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

celia middlemiss
France

—

Note: celia middlemiss sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brid
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brid
Ireland

—

Note: Brid sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: tim
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

tim
United Kingdom

Note: tim sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sue
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sue
United Kingdom

Note: Sue sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linda Humm
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linda Humm
United Kingdom

Note: Linda Humm sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Yvonne Barclay
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Yvonne Barclay
United Kingdom

Note: Yvonne Barclay sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: PETER CRANMER
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

PETER CRANMER
United Kingdom

Note: PETER CRANMER sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sherry Davis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sherry Davis
United Kingdom

Note: Sherry Davis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roisin O'Doherty
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roisin O'Doherty
United Kingdom

Note: Roisin O'Doherty sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frances Bee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frances Bee
United Kingdom

Note: Frances Bee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: St. Euler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

St. Euler
Germany

Note: St. Euler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susannah Flack
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susannah Flack
United Kingdom

Note: Susannah Flack sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Phoebe Moxsom-Turnbull
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Phoebe Moxsom-Turnbull
United Kingdom

Note: Phoebe Moxsom-Turnbull sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: H.J. Pierik
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

H.J. Pierik
Netherlands

Note: H.J. Pierik sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jeanette
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook. remember that Google was made so all could be heard - let's stay free people and let all - big as little have a voice that's what has been so beautiful about cyberspace - please keep it that way

Jeanette

From: Vlad Gheorghe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vlad Gheorghe
Romania

Note: Vlad Gheorghe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Stockbridge
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Stockbridge
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Stockbridge sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brenda Rudolf
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brenda Rudolf
United Kingdom

Note: Brenda Rudolf sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Hutchinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Hutchinson
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Hutchinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Sanders
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Local and national democracy has come to depend upon the freedom of speech and knowledge accessible to all through equal Internet access.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Sanders
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Sanders sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leyla Giray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leyla Giray
France

—

Note: Leyla Giray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carol Lincoln
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carol Lincoln
United Kingdom

Note: Carol Lincoln sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerry Doyle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerry Doyle
Ireland

—

Note: Gerry Doyle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: barry venning
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

barry venning
United Kingdom

Note: barry venning sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philipp Dörle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philipp Dörle
Germany

Note: Philipp Dörle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ron Lynch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ron Lynch
United Kingdom

Note: Ron Lynch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anthony I
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anthony I
United Kingdom

Note: Anthony I sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicole de Schwartz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicole de Schwartz
Netherlands

Note: Nicole de Schwartz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karina
United Kingdom

Note: Karina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ann Yarwood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ann Yarwood
United Kingdom

Note: Ann Yarwood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger Ward
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger Ward
United Kingdom

Note: Roger Ward sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Les Stead
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Les Stead
United Kingdom

Note: Les Stead sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: john.matthews
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

john matthews
United Kingdom

Note: john matthews sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Van den Elsen Leo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Van den Elsen Leo

Belgium

Note: Van den Elsen Leo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Osvaldo Scognamiglio
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Osvaldo Scognamiglio
Italy

Note: Osvaldo Scognamiglio sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mirjam Stricker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mirjam Stricker
Germany

Note: Mirjam Stricker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Valkenberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Valkenberg
Germany

Note: Michael Valkenberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Raymond Will
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Raymond Will
United Kingdom

Note: Raymond Will sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Duncan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Duncan
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Duncan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dargham Mekki
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dargham Mekki
Netherlands

Note: Dargham Mekki sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Tabbron
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Tabbron
United Kingdom

Note: Christine Tabbron sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jason Ng
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jason Ng
United Kingdom

Note: Jason Ng sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patrick Spence
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patrick Spence
United Kingdom

Note: Patrick Spence sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Saulius - Simonas Ramanauskas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Saulius - Simonas Ramanauskas
Lithuania

Note: Saulius - Simonas Ramanauskas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Debora Figueira
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Debora Figueira
United Kingdom

Note: Debora Figueira sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marion Sossen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marion Sossen
United Kingdom

Note: Marion Sossen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alina
United Kingdom

Note: Alina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Krzysztof Gigon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Krzysztof Gigon
Ireland

—

Note: Krzysztof Gigon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Benjamin Geyer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Benjamin Geyer
France

—

Note: Benjamin Geyer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Debra Geeson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Debra Geeson
United Kingdom

Note: Debra Geeson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Darren mallette
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Darren mallette
United Kingdom

Note: Darren mallette sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pamela Cullen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pamela Cullen
France

—

Note: Pamela Cullen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike London
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike London
United Kingdom

Note: Mike London sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonny Wilkinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonny Wilkinson
United Kingdom

Note: Jonny Wilkinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rui Cardona
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rui Cardona
Portugal

Note: Rui Cardona sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Johan Forssblad
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Johan Forssblad
Sweden

—

Note: Johan Forssblad sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ànne
United Kingdom

Note: Ànne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daiva Sereikaite
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daiva Sereikaite
Lithuania

Note: Daiva Sereikaite sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karl-Fredrik Widlund
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karl-Fredrik Widlund
Sweden

—

Note: Karl-Fredrik Widlund sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roy Ashworth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roy Ashworth
United Kingdom

Note: Roy Ashworth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Jolliffe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Jolliffe
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Jolliffe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Pring
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Pring
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew Pring sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nils Slättberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nils Slättberg
Sweden

Note: Nils Slättberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shirley Sato
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shirley Sato
United Kingdom

Note: Shirley Sato sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Raymond
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Raymond
Italy

Note: Raymond sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Iain Goldfinch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Iain Goldfinch
United Kingdom

Note: Iain Goldfinch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Brener
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Brener
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Brener sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Annemie Osborne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annemie Osborne
Belgium

Note: Annemie Osborne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jarno.jaappinen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jarno jaappinen
Finland

—

Note: jarno jaappinen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Keith Bishop
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Keith Bishop
United Kingdom

Note: Keith Bishop sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: graham.aldridge@yahoo.co.uk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Graham Aldridge
United Kingdom

Note: graham.aldridge@yahoo.co.uk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caroline van Gastel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caroline van Gastel
Belgium

Note: Caroline van Gastel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Warner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Warner
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Warner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Paalvast
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Paalvast
Netherlands

Note: Peter Paalvast sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Saskia Erden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Saskia Erden
Germany

Note: Saskia Erden sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: n.gallagher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

n.gallagher
Ireland

Note: n.gallagher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marleen Christensen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marleen Christensen
Netherlands

Note: Marleen Christensen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barbara Garattini
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barbara Garattini
Italy

Note: Barbara Garattini sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris smith
United Kingdom

Note: Chris smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Neil Pittaway
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Neil Pittaway
United Kingdom

Note: Neil Pittaway sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ola
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ola
Sweden

—

Note: ola sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael power
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael power
Ireland

Note: Michael power sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Louise Allen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Louise Allen
United Kingdom

Note: Louise Allen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Goodwin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Goodwin
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Goodwin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cynthia Rensman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cynthia Rensman
Netherlands

Note: Cynthia Rensman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen Rowe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen Rowe
United Kingdom

Note: Karen Rowe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jeremy Chadwick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jeremy Chadwick
United Kingdom

Note: Jeremy Chadwick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fabian Breckels
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fabian Breckels
United Kingdom

Note: Fabian Breckels sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Penny
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Penny
United Kingdom

Note: Penny sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Heather Todd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Heather Todd
United Kingdom

Note: Heather Todd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: nallypayne@yahoo.co.uk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

nallypayne@yahoo.co.uk
United Kingdom

Note: nallypayne@yahoo.co.uk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert van der Bent
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert van der Bent
Portugal

Note: Robert van der Bent sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: TERRY MATTINSON
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

TERRY MATTINSON
United Kingdom

Note: TERRY MATTINSON sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gus Bowen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gus Bowen
Ireland

Note: Gus Bowen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: leah_rouse
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

leah rouse
United Kingdom

Note: leah rouse sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin McLoone
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin McLoone
Ireland

Note: Martin McLoone sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sean Corcoran
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sean Corcoran
Ireland

—

Note: Sean Corcoran sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Danny Kleian
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Danny Kleian
Netherlands

Note: Danny Kleian sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mrs Joanna Hoskin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mrs Joanna Hoskin
Cyprus

Note: Mrs Joanna Hoskin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ronnie Wilson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ronnie Wilson
United Kingdom

Note: Ronnie Wilson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Doe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Doe
Germany

Note: John Doe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Zagyvai
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Zagyvai
Hungary

Note: Peter Zagyvai sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sam Tasker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sam Tasker
United Kingdom

Note: Sam Tasker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tarja Salomaa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tarja Salomaa
Finland

Note: Tarja Salomaa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ramute Barasiene
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ramute Barasiene
Lithuania

Note: Ramute Barasiene sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Reed
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Reed
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Reed sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Powell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Powell
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Powell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony Wilson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony Wilson
United Kingdom

Note: Tony Wilson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zdravko Krajacic
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zdravko Krajacic
Belgium

Note: Zdravko Krajacic sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Birgitta Larsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Birgitta Larsson
Sweden

Note: Birgitta Larsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dian George
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dian George
Spain

—

Note: Dian George sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: André Swanepoel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

André Swanepoel
United Kingdom

Note: André Swanepoel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: felicity
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

felicity
Netherlands

Note: felicity sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sjanet Beer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sjanet
The Netherlands

Note: Sjanet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adrian Gosling
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adrian Gosling
United Kingdom

Note: Adrian Gosling sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katia Borisova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Katia Borisova
България

Note: Katia Borisova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jens Stoltenberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jens Stoltenberg
Finland

—

Note: Jens Stoltenberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: j.m.van.hinte
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

j m van hinte
Netherlands

—

Note: j m van hinte sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matthew Gee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matthew Gee
United Kingdom

Note: Matthew Gee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: E Scanlan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

E Scanlan
United Kingdom

Note: E Scanlan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barry
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barry
France

—

Note: Barry sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane Gamblin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane Gamblin
United Kingdom

Note: Jane Gamblin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Laurence Shand
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Laurence Shand
Spain

—

Note: Laurence Shand sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martens Rudolf
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martens Rudolf
France

Note: Martens Rudolf sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Cluley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Cluley
United Kingdom

Note: David Cluley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Louise Davey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Louise Davey
United Kingdom

Note: Louise Davey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roediger Sabine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roediger Sabine
Germany

Note: Roediger Sabine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mrs Elisabeth Groves
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mrs Elisabeth Groves
United Kingdom

Note: Mrs Elisabeth Groves sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janin Nimtz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janin Nimtz
Germany

Note: Janin Nimtz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Homler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Homler
United States of America

Note: Anna Homler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shakti de Sousa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shakti de Sousa
Germany

Note: Shakti de Sousa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rose Hawker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rose Hawker
United Kingdom

Note: Rose Hawker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Penelope Dransart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

I am writing to ask you to consider carefully the Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Penelope Dransart
United Kingdom

Note: Penelope Dransart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kath Milner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kath Milner
United Kingdom

Note: Kath Milner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: van Hoyer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

van Hoyer
Hungary

Note: van Hoyer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elaine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elaine
United Kingdom

Note: Elaine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eva Ullrich
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eva Ullrich
Germany

Note: Eva Ullrich sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kevin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kevin
United Kingdom

Note: Kevin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane Reynolds
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane Reynolds
United Kingdom

Note: Jane Reynolds sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eirlys Evans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Please protect citizens from the multinationals.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eirlys Evans
United Kingdom

Note: Eirlys Evans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: tim hamnett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

tim hamnett
United Kingdom

Note: tim hamnett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sebastjan Penko
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sebastjan Penko
Slovenia

Note: Sebastjan Penko sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony Galvin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony Galvin
Ireland

Note: Tony Galvin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brendan Callaghan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brendan Callaghan
United Kingdom

Note: Brendan Callaghan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stefan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stefan
United Kingdom

Note: Stefan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Luís Domingos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Luís Domingos
Portugal

Note: Luís Domingos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J.A.STRAUSS
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J.A.STRAUSS
United Kingdom

Note: J.A.STRAUSS sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joe Fallon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joe Fallon
United Kingdom

Note: Joe Fallon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: inge_lybro_nielsen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

inge lybro nielsen
Denmark

Note: inge lybro nielsen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aviott John
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aviott John
Austria

Note: Aviott John sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: GINA CHRONOWICZ
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

GINA CHRONOWICZ
United Kingdom

Note: GINA CHRONOWICZ sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amos Myatt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amos Myatt
Denmark

Note: Amos Myatt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elias Durnez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elias Durnez
Belgium

Note: Elias Durnez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Filipa Komuro
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Filipa Komuro
United Kingdom

Note: Filipa Komuro sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Rudd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Rudd
United Kingdom

Note: David Rudd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Till Bentz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Till Bentz
Germany

Note: Till Bentz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gelske van Beekhoff
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gelske van Beekhoff
Netherlands

Note: Gelske van Beekhoff sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Harm van de Pas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Harm van de Pas
Netherlands

Note: Harm van de Pas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mita Datta
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mita Datta
United Kingdom

Note: Mita Datta sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mel Gannon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mel Gannon
Ireland

Note: Mel Gannon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Wright
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Wright
United Kingdom

Note: John Wright sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Merran Firth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Merran Firth
New Zealand

Note: Merran Firth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tiago
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tiago
Portugal

Note: Tiago sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matt Lincoln
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matt Lincoln
United Kingdom

Note: Matt Lincoln sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony Cooper
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony Cooper
United Kingdom

Note: Tony Cooper sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Clare de Villanueva
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Clare de Villanueva
United Kingdom

Note: Clare de Villanueva sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Saranna Riley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Saranna Riley Riley
UK

—

Note: Saranna Riley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Louise
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Louise
United Kingdom

Note: Louise sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tom Martin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas Martin
United Kingdom

Note: Tom sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dagmara
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dagmara
Poland

Note: Dagmara sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: peter hampson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

peter hampson
United Kingdom

Note: peter hampson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karl Stern
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karl Stern
United Kingdom

Note: Karl Stern sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tooten Lea
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tooten Lea
Belgium

Note: Tooten Lea sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Imran Bashir
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Imran Bashir
United Kingdom

Note: Imran Bashir sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Josephine Statham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Josephine Statham
United Kingdom

Note: Josephine Statham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jessica
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jessica
United Kingdom

Note: Jessica sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Benjamin Jonas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Benjamin Jonas
Germany

Note: Benjamin Jonas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: CARLOS VIEIRA
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

CARLOS VIEIRA
Belgium

Note: CARLOS VIEIRA sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jeanine Herbert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jeanine Herbert
United Kingdom

Note: Jeanine Herbert sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lloyd Robinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lloyd Robinson
Netherlands

Note: Lloyd Robinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: W. CHESTER
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

W. CHESTER
United Kingdom

Note: W. CHESTER sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ludwig Vinterdag
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ludwig Vinterdag
Sweden

Note: Ludwig Vinterdag sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Albrecht Richard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Albrecht Richard
Germany

Note: Albrecht Richard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sandra Beach
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sandra Beach
United Kingdom

Note: Sandra Beach sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jakob
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jakob
Slovenia

Note: Jakob sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mrs S Kennedy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mrs S Kennedy
United Kingdom

Note: Mrs S Kennedy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angelika Golz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angelika Golz
United Kingdom

Note: Angelika Golz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hans
Sweden

—

Note: Hans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Don
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Don
France

—

Note: Don sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ron Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ron Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Ron Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynne Lamb
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynne Lamb
United Kingdom

Note: Lynne Lamb sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gustaf Lindqvist
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gustaf Lindqvist
Sweden

—

Note: Gustaf Lindqvist sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Benita Dyal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Benita Dyal
United Kingdom

Note: Benita Dyal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Phillips
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Phillips
United Kingdom

Note: Steve Phillips sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jenni Kitely
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jenni Kitely
United Kingdom

Note: Jenni Kitely sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gordon Stevenson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gordon Stevenson
United Kingdom

Note: Gordon Stevenson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brigitte Schulz-van Lier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brigitte Schulz-van Lier
Germany

Note: Brigitte Schulz-van Lier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Allan Dunbar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Allan Dunbar
United Kingdom

Note: Allan Dunbar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: N.
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

N.

United Kingdom

Note: N. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michel HUBERT
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michel HUBERT
Luxembourg

Note: Michel HUBERT sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: C.Wise
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

C Wise
United Kingdom

Note: C Wise sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aaf dawes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aaf dawes
United Kingdom

Note: Aaf dawes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eva
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eva
United Kingdom

Note: Eva sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J.Lewys
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J Lewys
United Kingdom

Note: J Lewys sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tara Shaikh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tara Shaikh
United Kingdom

Note: Tara Shaikh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helena Sharkey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helena Sharkey
United Kingdom

Note: Helena Sharkey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas Grayson-Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guideline creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, so they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lane' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-up and citizen movement like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposal that would allow service providers to prioritize certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or bandwidth management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultation. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For reasons, I urge you to amend the current draft guideline according to the following policy analysis:
<http://avaazimage.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysis.pdf>

--

Thomas Grayson-Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Thomas Grayson-Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <http://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: stefan.karlsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

stefan.karlsson
Sweden

Note: stefan.karlsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Deborah Pattinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Deborah Pattinson
United Kingdom

Note: Deborah Pattinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margarita Bosas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margarita Bosas
Finland

Note: Margarita Bosas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Francisco Ruata Salamero
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Francisco Ruata Salamero
Spain

—

Note: Francisco Ruata Salamero sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sean reilly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sean reilly
Ireland

—

Note: sean reilly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lorna Barker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lorna Barker
United Kingdom

Note: Lorna Barker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ann Crowe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ann Crowe
United Kingdom

Note: Ann Crowe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carol
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carol
United Kingdom

Note: Carol sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Thornton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Thornton
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Thornton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shruthi Vembar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shruthi Vembar
France

Note: Shruthi Vembar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robin Murison
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Freedom of speech is an essential part of global development small inventors often come up with good ideas that can solve global problems given the right backing.

Small teams have always been seen as the fastest way to solve problems. In IT any team over five people slows down.

That is why big corporations slow down as they develop a mountain of technical debt on more and more products each of which helps their main flag ship products and the teams often get too bulky to work efficiently.

Where as a small team focusing on 1 problem for an App Store or Open source product often come up with a much better solution faster.

So I thoroughly believe that the internet should be an even playing field where the small players can triumph.

It is essential that all members of the internet community have the same opportunities on the internet to solve all the global problems. Young academics often know most about a particular problem and working together could solve the problem without being a part of a multinational corporation.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate or political takeover of the Internet, We need diversity, equality, competition and innovation.

- The UK is already trailing behind Japan and Korea in our personal internet speeds. We need to be working at GigaBits per second not 100Mbps

- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'.

This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.

- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.

- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robin Murison

United Kingdom

Note: Robin Murison sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gail Heyworth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gail Heyworth
United Kingdom

Note: Gail Heyworth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cosimo Pietro Antonio McCaffrey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cosimo Pietro Antonio McCaffrey
United Kingdom

Note: Cosimo Pietro Antonio McCaffrey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matt Logan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matt Logan
United Kingdom

Note: Matt Logan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ronald Queck
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ronald Queck
Germany

Note: Ronald Queck sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Stead
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Stead
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Stead sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Piers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Piers
United Kingdom

Note: Piers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jørn Wad
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jørn Wad
Norway

Note: Jørn Wad sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J.Clarke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J Clarke
United Kingdom

Note: J Clarke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: kobus smit
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

kobus smit
United Kingdom

Note: kobus smit sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane Parkin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane Parkin
Portugal

Note: Jane Parkin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J. O. Bell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J. O. Bell
Netherlands

Note: J. O. Bell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael spence
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael spence
United Kingdom

Note: Michael spence sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sue
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sue
United Kingdom

Note: Sue sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ela
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ela
Italy

—

Note: Ela sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jesper Pedersen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jesper Pedersen
Denmark

Note: Jesper Pedersen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Reinhold Preiner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Reinhold Preiner
Austria

Note: Reinhold Preiner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sally Billings
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sally Billings
United Kingdom

Note: Sally Billings sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Malcolm-walker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Malcolm-walker
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Malcolm-walker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Agnieszka Jakubowska
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Agnieszka Jakubowska
Poland

Note: Agnieszka Jakubowska sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Melissa Briggs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Melissa Briggs
United Kingdom

Note: Melissa Briggs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex
United Kingdom

Note: Alex sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Antonio Barbosa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Antonio Barbosa
United Kingdom

Note: Antonio Barbosa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James
Ireland

—

Note: James sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Martin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Martin
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Martin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: GEORGIA MARGARITI
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

GEORGIA MARGARITI
Greece

Note: GEORGIA MARGARITI sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kevin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kevin
United Kingdom

Note: Kevin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Morris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Morris
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Morris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Trevor May
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Trevor May
United Kingdom

Note: Trevor May sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Golden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Golden
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Golden sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bob Squirrell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bob Squirrell
Cyprus

Note: Bob Squirrell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne
United Kingdom

Note: Anne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen S.-Jensen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen S.-Jensen
Denmark

Note: Karen S.-Jensen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mel Gannon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mel Gannon
Ireland

Note: Mel Gannon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: pete hamilton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pete hamilton
UK

—

Note: pete hamilton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: V. Roos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

V. Roos
Netherlands

Note: V. Roos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Manuel Angel Fernandez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Manuel Angel Fernandez
Spain

Note: Manuel Angel Fernandez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rebecca
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rebecca
United States of America

Note: Rebecca sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert
United Kingdom

Note: Robert sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lucy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lucy
Ireland

—

Note: Lucy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vagn Bjørno
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vagn Bjørno
Denmark

Note: Vagn Bjørno sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aldo Hernandez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aldo Hernandez
United Kingdom

Note: Aldo Hernandez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria Blumenthal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria Blumenthal
Germany

Note: Maria Blumenthal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kirsi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kirsi
Finland

—

Note: Kirsi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margareta Nilsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margareta Nilsson
Sweden

Note: Margareta Nilsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Judy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Judy
United Kingdom

Note: Judy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stefano Fochetti
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stefano Fochetti
Italy

Note: Stefano Fochetti sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Becky Lange
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Becky Lange
Germany

Note: Becky Lange sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: malcolm maclean
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Malcolm Maclean
United Kingdom

Note: malcolm maclean sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: R Coldman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

R Coldman
Poland

—

Note: R Coldman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cary McQueen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cary McQueen
United Kingdom

Note: Cary McQueen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: SHAN LLOYD-PACKER
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

SHAN LLOYD-PACKER
United Kingdom

Note: SHAN LLOYD-PACKER sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vivaldo Veiga
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vivaldo Veiga
Portugal

Note: Vivaldo Veiga sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Debby Morris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Debby Morris
United Kingdom

Note: Debby Morris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philippe Desmars
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philippe Desmars
Belgium

Note: Philippe Desmars sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dardo S. Allen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dardo S. Allen
Denmark

Note: Dardo S. Allen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David White
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David White
United Kingdom

Note: David White sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marius
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marius
Romania

Note: Marius sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elena
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elena
Bulgaria

Note: Elena sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Yolanda Van Hout
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Yolanda Van Hout
België

Note: Yolanda Van Hout sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eva Greene
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eva Greene
United Kingdom

Note: Eva Greene sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A. Da Costa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--A. da Costa
A. Da Costa
United Kingdom

—
Note: A. Da Costa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: chris.park
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

chris park
United Kingdom

Note: chris park sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miguel Rocha
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miguel Rocha
Portugal

From: Michael Parkin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Parkin
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Parkin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ROD BIRTLES
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ROD BIRTLES
United Kingdom

Note: ROD BIRTLES sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: niklas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

niklas
Germany

Note: niklas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Cronk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Cronk
France

—

Note: Paul Cronk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: allan wilson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

allan wilson
United Kingdom

Note: allan wilson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oliver Miles
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oliver Miles
Netherlands

Note: Oliver Miles sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lesley Brinkworth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lesley Brinkworth
United Kingdom

Note: Lesley Brinkworth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Reeves
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Reeves
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Reeves sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sharon Bracher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sharon Bracher
United Kingdom

Note: Sharon Bracher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: S. Shwani
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

S. Shwani
United Kingdom

Note: S. Shwani sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Annamária Fender
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annamária Fender
Romania

—

Note: Annamária Fender sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Howard Farmer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Howard Farmer
United Kingdom

Note: Howard Farmer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr. Gordon Watson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr. Gordon Watson
United Kingdom

Note: Dr. Gordon Watson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Heather Wood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Heather Wood
United Kingdom

Note: Heather Wood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick Coulson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick Coulson
United Kingdom

Note: Nick Coulson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dirk Strack
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dirk Strack
Germany

Note: Dirk Strack sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patrick Deony
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patrick Deony
UK

—

Note: Patrick Deony sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Valerie Clark
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Valerie Clark
United Kingdom

Note: Valerie Clark sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Olimpia Garcia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Olimpia Garcia
Sweden

Note: Olimpia Garcia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynne Doyle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynne Doyle
United Kingdom

Note: Lynne Doyle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Magnus Lof
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Magnus Lof
Sweden

Note: Magnus Lof sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sorrel Pindar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sorrel Pindar
United Kingdom

Note: Sorrel Pindar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eric Faynot
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eric Faynot
France

Note: Eric Faynot sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sian Richards
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sian Richards
United Kingdom

Note: Sian Richards sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: H C FOUNTAIN
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

H C FOUNTAIN
United Kingdom

Note: H C FOUNTAIN sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Weigelt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Weigelt
Germany

Note: Martin Weigelt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frank McEntaggart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frank McEntaggart
United Kingdom

Note: Frank McEntaggart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jon Dixon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jon Dixon
United Kingdom

Note: Jon Dixon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Viv Seears
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Viv Seears
United Kingdom

Note: Viv Seears sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kate bond
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kate bond
United Kingdom

Note: Kate bond sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philippa Baile
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philippa Baile
United Kingdom

Note: Philippa Baile sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Desmond
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Desmond
Ireland

Note: Brian Desmond sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marianne Ström
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marianne Ström
Sweden

Note: Marianne Ström sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emelie J
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emelie J
Sweden

Note: Emelie J sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roy Beddoe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roy Beddoe
United Kingdom

Note: Roy Beddoe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marian Prowse
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marian Prowse
United Kingdom

Note: Marian Prowse sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Georgios Nikolakaros
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Georgios Nikolakaros
Finland

—

Note: Georgios Nikolakaros sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: stefan klima
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

stefan klima
France

Note: stefan klima sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thom Doria
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thom Doria
United Kingdom

Note: Thom Doria sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Judith Turban
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Judith Turban
Germany

Note: Judith Turban sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rosalie Anne wheeler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rosalie Anne wheeler
Spain

Note: Rosalie Anne wheeler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Szaszy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

The internet belongs to everyone. It is not for the 1% richest few owners of corporations in the world to ever control our rights to the freedom of information.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Szaszy
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Szaszy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Morrice
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Morrice
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew Morrice sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nan Davies
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nan Davies
United Kingdom

Note: Nan Davies sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Fisher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Fisher
United Kingdom

Note: David Fisher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frank Jansen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frank Jansen
Sweden

Note: Frank Jansen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ella
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ella
United Kingdom

Note: Ella sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Debbi Rodger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Debbi Rodger
United Kingdom

Note: Debbi Rodger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aaron Kollmann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aaron Kollmann
Germany

Note: Aaron Kollmann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mr Pavels Vasilenko
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mr Pavels Vasilenko
United Kingdom

Note: Mr Pavels Vasilenko sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen Frey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen Frey
France

—

Note: Karen Frey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sheila Brockelbank
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sheila Brockelbank
United Kingdom

Note: Sheila Brockelbank sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerrit Woning
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerrit Woning
Germany

Note: Gerrit Woning sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joanna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joanna
United Kingdom

Note: Joanna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mrs. Rae
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mrs. Rae
United Kingdom

Note: Mrs. Rae sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Mercer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Mercer
Ireland

—

Note: John Mercer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karin
Germany

—

Note: Karin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: marting pring
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

marting pring
United Kingdom

Note: marting pring sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Conway Davies
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Conway Davies
United Kingdom

Note: Conway Davies sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: dj bruens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

dj bruens
United Kingdom

Note: dj bruens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zsofia Csontos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zsofia Csontos
United Kingdom

Note: Zsofia Csontos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alison
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alison
United Kingdom

Note: Alison sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Jakobsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Jakobsson
Sweden

Note: Jan Jakobsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jackie Cumming
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jackie Cumming
United Kingdom

Note: Jackie Cumming sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oliver Palenik
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oliver Palenik
Slovakia

Note: Oliver Palenik sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andy Fraser
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andy Fraser
United Kingdom

Note: Andy Fraser sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vanessa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vanessa
United Kingdom

Note: Vanessa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kath Butland
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kath Butland
United Kingdom

Note: Kath Butland sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ramón Bustelo Soto
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ramón Bustelo Soto
Spain

—

Note: Ramón Bustelo Soto sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Fartelj
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Fartelj
Slovenia

Note: Peter Fartelj sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jean Dabinett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jean Dabinett
United Kingdom

Note: Jean Dabinett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: G.R. Hounsell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:20:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

G.R. Hounsell
United Kingdom

Note: G.R. Hounsell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tessa France
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tessa France
United Kingdom

Note: Tessa France sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex Fryer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex Fryer
United Kingdom

Note: Alex Fryer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andy Martin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andy Martin
Germany

Note: Andy Martin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Supna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Supna
United Kingdom

Note: Supna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jackie grace
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jackie grace
United Kingdom

Note: jackie grace sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Wichlinska-Kacprzak
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Free Net is one of few last places where we still can feel equal. Corporate giants try to take over every aspect of our lives. Please, don't let them.
- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Wichlinska-Kacprzak
Poland

Note: Anna Wichlinska-Kacprzak sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kira
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kira
United Kingdom

Note: Kira sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Meehan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Meehan
Spain

Note: John Meehan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael & Joan Tomlinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael & Joan Tomlinson
United Kingdom

Note: Michael & Joan Tomlinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oliver Broad
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oliver Broad
United Kingdom

Note: Oliver Broad sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul
United Kingdom

Note: Paul sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Davide Di Maio
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Davide Di Maio
United Kingdom

Note: Davide Di Maio sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jenni Hymoff Koepfel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jenni Hymoff Koepfel
Spain

—

Note: Jenni Hymoff Koepfel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chrit Mandigers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chrit Mandigers
Netherlands

Note: Chrit Mandigers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Tynas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Tynas
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Tynas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christopher Whitehead
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christopher Whitehead
United Kingdom

Note: Christopher Whitehead sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Dahlén
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Dahlén
Sweden

Note: Anna Dahlén sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sandra Skelly Skelly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sandra Skelly Skelly
United Kingdom

Note: Sandra Skelly Skelly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonas Žilinskas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonas Žilinskas
Lithuania

Note: Jonas Žilinskas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Louise Cooke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Louise Cooke
United Kingdom

Note: Louise Cooke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: José Francisco de Campos Ribeiro Flípe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

José Francisco de Campos Ribeiro Flípe
Portugal

Note: José Francisco de Campos Ribeiro Flípe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ken Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ken Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Ken Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Panos Nikolaou
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Panos Nikolaou
Greece

Note: Panos Nikolaou sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Haiko van Leeuwen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Haiko van Leeuwen
Netherlands

Note: Haiko van Leeuwen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: s hernandez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

s hernandez
United Kingdom

Note: s hernandez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fellmann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fellmann
Germany

Note: Fellmann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Petra van Raaij
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Petra van Raaij
Germany

Note: Petra van Raaij sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sean McCabe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sean McCabe
United Kingdom

Note: Sean McCabe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maksis Knutins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maksis Knutins
Latvia

Note: Maksis Knutins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katherine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Katherine
United Kingdom

Note: Katherine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Watt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Watt
Portugal

Note: Anne Watt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gabriella Epstein
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Gabriella Epstein
Netherlands

Note: Gabriella Epstein sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Moss
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Moss
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Moss sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marek Penther
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marek Penther
United Kingdom

Note: Marek Penther sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rob H.L.
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Rob H.L. Reijnders
The Netherlands

Note: Rob H.L. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alice
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alice
Denmark

—

Note: Alice sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ianthe Lauwaert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ianthe Lauwaert
Belgium

Note: ianthe Lauwaert sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joseph Nicholas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the creation of BEREC net neutrality guidelines into consideration.

-- Net neutrality rules protect everyone from a corporate takeover of the internet, because they help foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.

-- If "fast lanes" are allowed for the highest bidders, everyone else will end up in a "slow lane". This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements to survive next to dominant players such as Google and Facebook.

-- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers via preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.

-- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines accordingly.

--

Joseph Nicholas
United Kingdom

Note: Joseph Nicholas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Else Juncher Pedersen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Else Juncher Pedersen
Denmark

Note: Else Juncher Pedersen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joseph
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please keep the internet fair

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joseph
United Kingdom

Note: Joseph sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jim McQueeney
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:
<https://avaazima.org/avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jim McQueeney
United Kingdom

Note: Jim McQueeney sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>.
To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Desmond O'Sullivan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Desmond O'Sullivan
Ireland

—

Note: Desmond O'Sullivan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leo Critchley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:57

Dear Sir or Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

The Internet has changed the world, and yet there is good reason to think that the greatest changes it will usher in are still to come.

If it is to serve the needs of the largest number of people, and defend individual users against companies' and other organisations' interests when they conflict, there must be a strongly-worded and well-enforced set of neutrality regulations.

Facebook has already made moves towards differentiating between the Internet at large and their own systems, offering cheap or free access to Facebook while access to other sites incurred charges. This is not only unfair it is, in the long run, extremely dangerous – for all the same reasons that allowing a single corporate body to control a large portion of the press would be dangerous.

I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, “zero-rating” or class-based traffic management. In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For these reasons, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leo Critchley

From: Joonatan Saarhelo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joonatan Saarhelo
Finland

—

Note: Joonatan Saarhelo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: JOGA Singh Gill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

JOGA Singh Gill
United Kingdom

Note: JOGA Singh Gill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Olga van randwijck
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Olga van randwijck
Spain

—

Note: Olga van randwijck sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jeremy roor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:57

Dear Sirs,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jeremy roor
France

—

Note: jeremy roor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margaret Conoley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margaret Conoley
Austria

Note: Margaret Conoley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linsey van Ochten
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linsey van Ochten
Netherlands

Note: Linsey van Ochten sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maggie Ballard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maggie Ballard
United Kingdom

Note: Maggie Ballard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J. van Giffen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J. van Giffen
Netherlands

Note: J. van Giffen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dennis Driscoll
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dennis Driscoll
United Kingdom

Note: Dennis Driscoll sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leo Versteeg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leo Versteeg
Spain

—

Note: Leo Versteeg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: frances
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

frances
United Kingdom

Note: frances sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Harwich
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Harwich
United Kingdom

Note: Anna Harwich sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: G Simpson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

G Simpson
United Kingdom

Note: G Simpson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: aneta takhtamysh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

aneta takhtamysh
Germany

Note: aneta takhtamysh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Toone
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Toone
United Kingdom

Note: Toone sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barry O'Callaghan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barry O'Callaghan
Ireland

—

Note: Barry O'Callaghan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adrienne Margolis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adrienne Margolis
United Kingdom

Note: Adrienne Margolis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: C. Mecky
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

C. Mecky
Germany

Note: C. Mecky sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Venner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Venner
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Venner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Francois-David Freschi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.

If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.

I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.

In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

François-David Freschi
Belgium

Note: François-David Freschi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rebecca Bower
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rebecca Bower
United Kingdom

Note: Rebecca Bower sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sanne May Mogensen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sanne May Mogensen
Denmark

Note: Sanne May Mogensen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alice Vandre
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alice Vandre
Germany

Note: Alice Vandre sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Thompson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Thompson
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Thompson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: tannith perry
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

tannith perry
United Kingdom

Note: tannith perry sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linturn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linturn
United Kingdom

Note: Linturn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Florian Schmidt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Florian Schmidt
Germany

Note: Florian Schmidt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dusan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dusan
Slovenia

Note: Dusan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonie Adriaensen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonie Adriaensen
Belgium

Note: Jonie Adriaensen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lachezar Enchev
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lachezar Enchev
Bulgaria

Note: Lachezar Enchev sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elmer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elmer
Netherlands

Note: Elmer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Heather K Lockwood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Heather K Lockwood
Spain

—

Note: Heather K Lockwood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bento
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bento
Belgium

Note: Bento sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patrick McCool
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patrick McCool
United Kingdom

Note: Patrick McCool sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bill Newbury
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bill Newbury
United Kingdom

Note: Bill Newbury sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Geert Verrecht
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Geert Verrecht
Belgium

Note: Geert Verrecht sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zohar Lavie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zohar Lavie
United Kingdom

Note: Zohar Lavie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tommy Lindberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tommy Lindberg
Sweden

—

Note: Tommy Lindberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Piet Verstraeten
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Net neutrality is at the core of democracy. You know what to do. Just do not give in to lobbyists.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Piet Verstraeten
Belgium

Note: Piet Verstraeten sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Niels Juelsbak
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Niels Juelsbak
Denmark

Note: Niels Juelsbak sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sharon jervis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sharon jervis
United Kingdom

Note: Sharon jervis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrej Stas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrej Stas
Slovakia

Note: Andrej Stas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gordon Carroll
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gordon Carroll
United Kingdom

Note: Gordon Carroll sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Louis Skovsholt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Louis Skovsholt
Denmark

Note: Louis Skovsholt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sébastien Vanvelthem
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sébastien Vanvelthem
Belgium

Note: Sébastien Vanvelthem sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robin
United Kingdom

Note: Robin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Monaghan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Monaghan
Ireland

Note: Paul Monaghan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Finn Jacobsen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Finn Jacobsen
Sweden

—

Note: Finn Jacobsen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kathryn Lord
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kathryn Lord
United Kingdom

Note: Kathryn Lord sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: JURAJ KRIŽÁNI
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

JURAJ KRIŽÁNI
Slovakia

Note: JURAJ KRIŽÁNI sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julie Isaacs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julie Isaacs
United Kingdom

Note: Julie Isaacs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarah Willis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarah Willis
United Kingdom

Note: Sarah Willis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lisardo Fdez.
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lisardo Fdez.
Spain

—

Note: Lisardo Fdez. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Josie Wilks
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Josie Wilks
United Kingdom

Note: Josie Wilks sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ernest Lucas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ernest Lucas
United Kingdom

Note: Ernest Lucas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: philip_malcolm
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

philip malcolm
Ireland

—

Note: philip malcolm sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: victor_caprani
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

victor caprani
Ireland

—

Note: victor caprani sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rosemary Charlton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rosemary Charlton
Ireland

—

Note: Rosemary Charlton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Polia Stancheva
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Polia Stancheva
Bulgaria

Note: Polia Stancheva sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vasti Ezelius
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vasti Ezelius
Sweden

Note: Vasti Ezelius sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrene Skinner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrene Skinner
United Kingdom

Note: Andrene Skinner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: brian peters
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

brian peters
United Kingdom

Note: brian peters sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew flint
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew flint
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew flint sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Friedler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Friedler
United Kingdom

Note: Anna Friedler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leon
United Kingdom

Note: Leon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: LesleyHursthouse
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

LesleyHursthouse
United Kingdom

Note: LesleyHursthouse sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fi Sutherland
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fi Sutherland
United Kingdom

Note: Fi Sutherland sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Harley Price
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Harley Price
United Kingdom

Note: Harley Price sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow ‘fast lanes’ for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a ‘slow lane’. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, “zero-rating” or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it’s Europe’s turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard
Sweden

Note: Richard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rosemary Goddard Svendsen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

I am sending you this message because I personally feel very strongly about the subject. I rely very much on the internet for researching the subjects about which I write.

Therefore I ask you please take the following Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration:

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rosemary Goddard Svendsen
Denmark

Note: Rosemary Goddard Svendsen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jon Samsworth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jon Samsworth
United Kingdom

Note: Jon Samsworth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paolo Grimaldi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paolo Grimaldi
Italy

Note: Paolo Grimaldi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rebecca
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rebecca
United Kingdom

Note: Rebecca sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Greg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Greg
United Kingdom

Note: Greg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maura Ferdinando
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maura Ferdinando
United Kingdom

Note: Maura Ferdinando sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Scot
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Scot
United Kingdom

Note: Scot sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Agneta Tröjer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Agneta Tröjer
French Polynesia

Note: Agneta Tröjer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: adele jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

adele jones
Spain

—

Note: adele jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lilia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lilia
Germany

Note: Lilia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lorenz Steininger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lorenz Steininger
Germany

Note: Lorenz Steininger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hayley Carus
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hayley Carus
United Kingdom

Note: Hayley Carus sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wendy De Pooter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wendy De Pooter
Belgium

Note: Wendy De Pooter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: antonio illescas asenjo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

antonio illescas asenjo
Spain

—

Note: antonio illescas asenjo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Wilson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Wilson
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Wilson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: den carter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

den carter
United Kingdom

Note: den carter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cecilia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

--

Cecilia
Sweden

Note: Cecilia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pien Maltz-Klaar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pien Maltz-Klaar
United Kingdom

Note: Pien Maltz-Klaar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frederik
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frederik
Denmark

Note: Frederik sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Deborah Mabbitt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Deborah Mabbitt
United Kingdom

Note: Deborah Mabbitt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony
United Kingdom

Note: Tony sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stobinski
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Yvonne Stobinski]
[Germany]

—

Note: Yvonne Stobinski sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sven Schwiegelshohn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sven Schwiegelshohn
Germany

—

Note: Sven Schwiegelshohn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cristina Vicente Maese
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cristina Vicente Maese
Spain

—

Note: Cristina Vicente Maese sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: tarmo r.
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

tarmo r.
Estonia

Note: tarmo r. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniele de Winter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniele de Winter
United Kingdom

Note: Daniele de Winter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: edward goff
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

edward goff
United Kingdom

Note: edward goff sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hannah Schumacher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hannah Schumacher
Germany

Note: Hannah Schumacher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: R
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the cuRent proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the cuRent draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[R.]
[Germany]

—

Note: [R.] sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: kitte fennestad
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

kitte fennestad
Denmark

Note: kitte fennestad sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex
United Kingdom

Note: Alex sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cathy Upton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cathy Upton
Italy

Note: Cathy Upton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M N Robson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M N Robson
United Kingdom

Note: M N Robson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philip Gager
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philip Gager
United Kingdom

Note: Philip Gager sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andreas Olsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andreas Olsson
Sweden

—

Note: Andreas Olsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Merve
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Merve
Germany

Note: Merve sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simone Davi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simone Davi
Poland

—

Note: Simone Davi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Heli
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Heli
Estonia

Note: Heli sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Charles Robertson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Charles Robertson
United Kingdom

Note: Charles Robertson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Fanshawe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Fanshawe
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Fanshawe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Arunas Valatka
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Arunas Valatka
Lithuania

Note: Arunas Valatka sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hans Blaauboer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hans Blaauboer
Netherlands

Note: Hans Blaauboer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fernanda Gutiérrez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fernanda Gutiérrez
France

—

Note: Fernanda Gutiérrez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne nally
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne nally
Ireland

—

Note: Anne nally sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tove
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tove
United Kingdom

Note: Tove sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Ward
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Ward
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Ward sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Guzej Franc
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Guzej Franc
Slovenia

Note: Guzej Franc sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pavol
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pavol
Slovakia

Note: Pavol sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ginette Markwick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ginette Markwick
United Kingdom

Note: ginette Markwick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maura Ashworth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maura Ashworth
United Kingdom

Note: [Maura Ashworth] sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul
United Kingdom

Note: Paul sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: barnaby hatch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

barnaby hatch
United Kingdom

Note: barnaby hatch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Norbert Van den Bergh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Norbert Van den Bergh
Belgium

Note: Norbert Van den Bergh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: suzanne croxon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

suzanne croxon

--

suzanne croxon
United Kingdom
_uk__

Note: suzanne croxon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: lynne battles
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

lynne battles
United Kingdom

Note: lynne battles sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Moltke Wozniak
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Moltke Wozniak
Denmark

Note: Martin Moltke Wozniak sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Melanie Murray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Melanie Murray
United Kingdom

Note: Melanie Murray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: L west
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

L west
United Kingdom

Note: L west sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bim Egan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bim Egan
United Kingdom

Note: Bim Egan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Giacomo Iancer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Giacomo Iancer
Italy

—

Note: Giacomo Iancer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Meg roberts
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Meg roberts
United Kingdom

Note: Meg roberts sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: john wilson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

john wilson
United Kingdom

Note: john wilson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michaela Hoffmann de Almeida
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michaela Hoffmann de Almeida
Sweden

Note: Michaela Hoffmann de Almeida sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas de Roode
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas de Roode
Netherlands

Note: Thomas de Roode sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Deborah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Deborah
United Kingdom

Note: Deborah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: matt lipsey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

matt lipsey
United Kingdom

Note: matt lipsey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Monica Reuter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Monica Reuter
Sweden

Note: Monica Reuter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paulette Bais
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paulette Bais
Netherlands

Note: Paulette Bais sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Csaba Salamon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Csaba Salamon
United Kingdom

Note: Csaba Salamon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M Parsons
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M Parsons
United Kingdom

Note: M Parsons sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lily Vercuijsse
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lily Vercuijsse
Netherlands

Note: Lily Vercuijsse sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: john welch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

john welch
United States of America

Note: john welch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pamela Cook
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

We should be working towards a world of equality in all areas of care and well being and not making a bigger elitist devise which allowing a corporate take over of the Internet will do!

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pamela Cook
United Kingdom

Note: Pamela Cook sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kevin McGilligan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kevin McGilligan
United Kingdom

Note: Kevin McGilligan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Keith Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Regards

--

Keith Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Keith Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: rita flynn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

rita flynn
Ireland

—

Note: rita flynn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margaret Reeves
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Margaret Reeves
UK]

—

Note: Margaret Reeves sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alfred Leskovec
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alfred Leskovec
Slovenia

Note: Alfred Leskovec sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria-Elena Meegdes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria-Elena Meegdes
Netherlands

Note: Maria-Elena Meegdes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sally Giles
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sally Giles
United Kingdom

Note: Sally Giles sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter de Valk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter de Valk
Netherlands

Note: Peter de Valk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Giles Charter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Giles Charter
United Kingdom

Note: Giles Charter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anthony Williams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anthony Williams
United Kingdom

Note: Anthony Williams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Klaas de Jong
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Klaas de Jong
Netherlands

Note: Klaas de Jong sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Saleem Bhatti
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Saleem Bhatti
United Kingdom

Note: Saleem Bhatti sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A. Weizsäcker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

A. Weizsäcker
Germany

Note: A. Weizsäcker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger Jonsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger Jonsson
Sweden

Note: Roger Jonsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas Gray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas Gray
United Kingdom

Note: Thomas Gray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chunky Penhaul
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chunky Penhaul
United Kingdom

Note: Chunky Penhaul sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: merle lipton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

merle lipton
United Kingdom

Note: merle lipton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: z
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Zohra
United Kingdom

Note: z sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katharina Brems
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Katharina Brems
Belgium

Note: Katharina Brems sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: quemere
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

quemere
France

—

Note: quemere sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonno Ward
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonno Ward
United Kingdom

Note: Jonno Ward sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: D Anderson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

D Anderson
United Kingdom

Note: D Anderson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steven Pryer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steven Pryer
United Kingdom

Note: Steven Pryer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barbara Borts
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barbara Borts
United States of America

Note: Barbara Borts sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sylvain Piqué
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sylvain Piqué
Belgium

Note: Sylvain Piqué sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cecile Hohenlohe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cecile Hohenlohe
Germany

Note: Cecile Hohenlohe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bob Gates
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bob Gates
United Kingdom

Note: Bob Gates sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephanie Collins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephanie Collins Collins
United Kingdom

Note: [Stephanie Collins Collins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Henghes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Henghes
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Henghes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carolina Sribos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carolina Sribos
Netherlands

Note: Carolina Sribos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Prudencio Soriano
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Prudencio Soriano
Germany

Note: Prudencio Soriano sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Zalasiewicz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Zalasiewicz
United Kingdom

Note: Jan Zalasiewicz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarah duxbury
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarah duxbury
Ireland

—

Note: Sarah duxbury sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Clark
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Clark
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Clark sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rob Clack
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Thank you
Rob Clack
United Kingdom

—

Note: Rob Clack sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin
Greenland

Note: Martin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Theresa Blignaut
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Theresa Blignaut
United Kingdom

Note: Theresa Blignaut sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: E.Hubbard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

E Hubbard
United Kingdom

Note: E Hubbard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elizabeth Bathory-Porter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elizabeth Bathory-Porter
United Kingdom

Note: Elizabeth Bathory-Porter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Craig
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Craig
United Kingdom

Note: Craig sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrea Offner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

We must not lose the freedom to share essential knowledge and I am hoping that your voice can help safeguard our open internet usage.

- Net neutrality rules protect us all from a corporate takeover of the Internet. They foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to please close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrea Offner
France

—

Note: Andrea Offner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marco Faelli
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

-Marco Faelli
Italy

—

Note: Marco Faelli sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Danden Jensen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Danden Jensen
Sweden

Note: Danden Jensen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David
United Kingdom

Note: David sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eimantas Adzgauskas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eimantas Adzgauskas
Ireland

—

Note: Eimantas Adzgauskas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Phillip Lai-Fang
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Phillip Lai-Fang
United Kingdom

Note: Phillip Lai-Fang sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vicky Thiemann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vicky Thiemann
Netherlands

Note: Vicky Thiemann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: João Cardim
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

João Cardim
Portugal

Note: João Cardim sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Reinier van Tulder
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Reinier van Tulder
Netherlands

Note: Reinier van Tulder sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ivor Wood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ivor Wood
United Kingdom

Note: Ivor Wood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jim Dowling
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jim Dowling
Ireland

Note: Jim Dowling sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bou Bobadilla
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bou Bobadilla
United Kingdom

Note: Bou Bobadilla sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Phil Dotchon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Phil Dotchon
United Kingdom

Note: Phil Dotchon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carrie cox
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carrie cox
United Kingdom

Note: Carrie cox sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Stewart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Stewart
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Stewart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Nick Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barbara Darcy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

The internet should be free and fast for everyone.

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barbara Darcy
United Kingdom

Note: Barbara Darcy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: G. Molenaar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

G. Molenaar
Netherlands

Note: G. Molenaar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fernand
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fernand
France

—

Note: Fernand sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peta Morgan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peta Morgan
United Kingdom

Note: Peta Morgan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mary Jordan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mary Jordan
Ireland

Note: Mary Jordan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robin Olivier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robin Olivier
United Kingdom

Note: Robin Olivier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Duarte
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Duarte
Portugal

Note: Duarte sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kate Moore
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kate Moore
Spain

Note: Kate Moore sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: nikos.haralampous
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

nikos haralampous
Greece

Note: nikos haralampous sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joana Coloma
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joana Coloma
Portugal

Note: Joana Coloma sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simon Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simon Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Simon Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ann-Marie Dovernas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ann-Marie Dovernas
United Kingdom

Note: Ann-Marie Dovernas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maggie Boyle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maggie Boyle
United Kingdom

Note: Maggie Boyle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: José Castro
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

José Castro
Portugal

Note: José Castro sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin
United Kingdom

Note: Martin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janice Barron
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janice Barron
United Kingdom

Note: Janice Barron sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Urban Johannesson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Urban Johannesson
Sweden

Note: Urban Johannesson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mandy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mandy
United Kingdom

Note: Mandy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lauren
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lauren
United Kingdom

Note: Lauren sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Prem
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Prem
France

—

Note: Prem sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: marion vanderberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

marion vanderberg
United Kingdom

Note: marion vanderberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kamil Drews
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kamil Drews
Ireland

—

Note: Kamil Drews sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Norman Beattie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Norman Beattie
United Kingdom

Note: Norman Beattie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: nathalie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

nathalie
Spain

—

Note: nathalie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Denise Donnelly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Denise Donnelly
Ireland

Note: Denise Donnelly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sue clowe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sue clowe
United Kingdom

Note: Sue clowe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: pol.patoor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

pol patoor
Belgium

Note: pol patoor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Corina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Corina
Netherlands

Note: Corina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mr A Robinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mr A Robinson
United Kingdom

Note: Mr A Robinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joy Longshaw
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joy L.
United Kingdom

Note: Joy L. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dave Guppy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dave Guppy
United Kingdom

Note: Dave Guppy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Solveig
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Solveig
Sweden

Note: Solveig sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Benjamin Wolpert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Benjamin Wolpert
New Zealand

Note: Benjamin Wolpert sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Harold Lane
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Harold Lane
United Kingdom

Note: Harold Lane sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Malcolm Edge
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Malcolm Edge
United Kingdom

Note: Malcolm Edge sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christiane Schwind
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christiane Schwind, M. A.
Am Weidengraben 184
54296 TRIER
GERMANY

Note: Christiane Schwind sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan van de Kant
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan van de Kant
Netherlands

Note: Jan van de Kant sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerhard Nisslmüller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerhard Nisslmüller
Germany

Note: Gerhard Nisslmüller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Glyn Bingham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Glyn Bingham
United Kingdom

Note: Glyn Bingham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Garrett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Garrett
United Kingdom

Note: Anne Garrett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marika A.
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marika A.
Canada

Note: Marika A. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Coral
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Coral
United Kingdom

Note: Coral sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Corinne Brewer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Corinne Brewer
United Kingdom

Note: Corinne Brewer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kenneth Eriksson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kenneth Eriksson
Sweden

Note: Kenneth Eriksson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Deb Steed
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Deb Steed
United Kingdom

Note: Deb Steed sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: dom roscoe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

dom roscoe
United Kingdom

Note: dom roscoe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Funch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Funch
Denmark

Note: Michael Funch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Scott Newey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Scott Newey
United Kingdom

Note: Scott Newey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: N Ancliff
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

N Ancliff
United Kingdom

Note: N Ancliff sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chas Maguire
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chas Maguire
United Kingdom

Note: Chas Maguire sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Malcolm Bowden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Malcolm Bowden
United Kingdom

Note: Malcolm Bowden sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fionn Rawnsley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fionn Rawnsley
United Kingdom

Note: Fionn Rawnsley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philippe Green
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philippe Green
United Kingdom

Note: Philippe Green sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Me
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Me
Cyprus

Note: Me sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A A EVANS
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

I am shocked that this idea, so blatantly a corrupt one, should even be proposed!

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

A A EVANS
United Kingdom

Note: A A EVANS sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ingeborg Klijnstra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ingeborg Klijnstra
Netherlands

Note: Ingeborg Klijnstra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Myers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Myers
United Kingdom

Note: John Myers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: C. Sandes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

C Sandes
United Kingdom

Note: C Sandes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bryan Hatton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bryan Hatton
United Kingdom

Note: Bryan Hatton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Grace Miller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Grace Miller
United Kingdom

Note: Grace Miller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Iliana Stamboliyska
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Iliana Stamboliyska
Bulgaria

Note: Iliana Stamboliyska sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joey Schaufeli
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joey Schaufeli
Netherlands

Note: Joey Schaufeli sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: martine.wagenaar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

martine wagenaar
Spain

—

Note: martine wagenaar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Diana vreugdenhil
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Diana vreugdenhil
United Kingdom

Note: Diana vreugdenhil sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tonya Bennett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tonya Bennett
United Kingdom

Note: Tonya Bennett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ILIAS GRATSIAS
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ILIAS GRATSIAS
Greece

Note: ILIAS GRATSIAS sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J a Tuffnell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J a Tuffnell
United Kingdom

Note: J a Tuffnell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ms Carr
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ms Carr
United Kingdom

Note: Ms Carr sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marian Leber
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marian Leber
United Kingdom

Note: Marian Leber sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sophia Fesel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sophia Fesel
Austria

Note: Sophia Fesel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: patricia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

patricia
France

—

Note: patricia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria de Fátima Veiga
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria de Fátima Veiga
Portugal

Note: Maria de Fátima Veiga sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nese
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nese
United Kingdom

Note: Nese sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: mikel goddijn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

mikel goddijn
Italy

—

Note: mikel goddijn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter
United Kingdom

Note: Peter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynda Urhobo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynda Urhobo
United Kingdom

Note: Lynda Urhobo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: H Collinge
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

H Collinge
United Kingdom

Note: H Collinge sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Manjit Sandhu
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Manjit Sandhu
United Kingdom

Note: Manjit Sandhu sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marie De Viell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marie De Viell
Portugal

Note: Marie De Viell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Harley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Harley
United Kingdom

Note: Harley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tim Girven
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tim Girven
United Kingdom

Note: Tim Girven sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patricia Phillips
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patricia Phillips
United Kingdom

Note: Patricia Phillips sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Firas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Firas
Bulgaria

Note: Firas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ann Peterken
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ann Peterken
United Kingdom

Note: Ann Peterken sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Catherine Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Catherine Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Catherine Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Jonsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Jonsson
Sweden

—

Note: David Jonsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Terry Wood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Terry Wood
United Kingdom

Note: Terry Wood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maya
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maya
Bulgaria

Note: Maya sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Chambers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Chambers
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Chambers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zoë Chamberlain
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zoë Chamberlain
France

—

Note: Zoë Chamberlain sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: I
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

T

United Kingdom

Note: T sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Giles
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Giles
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Giles sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: P. Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

P Smith
United Kingdom

Note: P Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Wallace
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Wallace
United Kingdom

Note: John Wallace sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: baha sabry
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

baha sabry
United Kingdom

Note: baha sabry sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Majoros Mátyás
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Majoros Mátyás
Hungary

Note: Majoros Mátyás sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Niall Diamond
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Niall Diamond
Ireland

Note: Niall Diamond sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick Clark
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick Clark
United Kingdom

Note: Nick Clark sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linda
United Kingdom

Note: Linda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexander Busck
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexander Busck
Sweden

Note: Alexander Busck sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: amanda hickson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

amanda hickson
United Kingdom

Note: amanda hickson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David måansson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David måansson
Sweden

Note: David måansson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bryce Somerville
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bryce Somerville
United Kingdom

Note: Bryce Somerville sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger Phebey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger Phebey
United Kingdom

Note: Roger Phebey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sonja Van Hoof
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sonja Van Hoof
Belgium

Note: Sonja Van Hoof sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Panagiotis Mallioris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Panagiotis Mallioris
Netherlands

Note: Panagiotis Mallioris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick Armes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick Armes
United Kingdom

Note: Nick Armes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen Devincenzi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen Devincenzi
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen Devincenzi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Phil Thomson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Phil Thomson
United Kingdom

Note: Phil Thomson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joanna Hughes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joanna Hughes
United Kingdom

Note: Joanna Hughes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Lawson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Lawson
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Lawson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rob Kershaw
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rob Kershaw
United Kingdom

Note: Rob Kershaw sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Roake
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Roake
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Roake sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karin
Portugal

Note: Karin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paige
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paige
United Kingdom

Note: Paige sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynda Ryland
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynda Ryland
United Kingdom

Note: Lynda Ryland sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patricia Mason
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patricia Mason
United Kingdom

Note: Patricia Mason sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ursula Knapp
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ursula Knapp
United Kingdom

Note: Ursula Knapp sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonathan Higgs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonathan Higgs
United Kingdom

Note: Jonathan Higgs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ruth Hesse
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ruth Hesse
Germany

Note: Ruth Hesse sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stevie Wheeler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stevie Wheeler
United Kingdom

Note: Stevie Wheeler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Palmer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Palmer
Belgium

Note: Martin Palmer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lydia Vermeer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lydia Vermeer
Netherlands

Note: Lydia Vermeer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Imre
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Imre
Romania

Note: Imre sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Keith Penton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Net neutrality is an important principle that must not be diluted in any way. The internet is a common good. Don't let it turn into a "tragedy of the commons" by letting big companies stake out territory within it.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Keith Penton
United Kingdom

Note: Keith Penton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: D Samuels
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

D Samuels
United Kingdom

Note: D Samuels sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan barwick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan barwick
United Kingdom

Note: Jan barwick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Val
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Val
United Kingdom

Note: Val sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nigel King
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nigel King
United Kingdom

Note: Nigel King sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karl Casey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karl Casey
Ireland

Note: Karl Casey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Larke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Larke
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Larke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gill Becker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gill
UK

—

Note: Gill Becker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karel Van Gerven
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karel Van Gerven
Belgium

Note: Karel Van Gerven sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Juha T. Koivisto
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Juha T. Koivisto
Finland

—

Note: Juha T. Koivisto sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miha Pecenik
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miha Pecenik
Slovenia

Note: Miha Pecenik sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Uffe Hylin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Uffe Hylin
Sweden

Note: Uffe Hylin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julie Wilkinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julie Wilkinson
United Kingdom

Note: Julie Wilkinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Davies
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Davies
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Davies sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lion
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lion
Germany

Note: Lion sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margiti Papa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margiti Papa
France

Note: Margiti Papa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dino Ciuffetti
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dino Ciuffetti
Italy

Note: Dino Ciuffetti sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris
United Kingdom

Note: Chris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leanne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leanne
France

—

Note: Leanne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tessa Allen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tessa Allen
United Kingdom

Note: Tessa Allen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Neil Hamilton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Neil Hamilton
United Kingdom

Note: Neil Hamilton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Mason
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Mason
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Mason sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Darko Vlajic
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Darko Vlajic
United Kingdom

Note: Darko Vlajic sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John
United Kingdom

Note: John sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Avril Salter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Avril Salter
United Kingdom

Note: Avril Salter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alejandro
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alejandro
Spain

Note: Alejandro sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Etienne Milazzo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Etienne Milazzo
France

—

Note: Etienne Milazzo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kurt Boje
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kurt Boje
Denmark

Note: Kurt Boje sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vicki Baker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vicki Baker
United Kingdom

Note: Vicki Baker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Diane Davidson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Diane Davidson
United Kingdom

Note: Diane Davidson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: rebab
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rebab
uk

Note: rebab sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Spowage
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Spowage
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Spowage sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sue Breetzke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sue Breetzke
United Kingdom

Note: Sue Breetzke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Eisensee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Eisensee
Denmark

Note: Anne Eisensee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rosie Bryant
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Rosie Bryant]
[UK]

—

Note: [] sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jorge Luis Zelaya
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jorge Luis Zelaya
France

Note: Jorge Luis Zelaya sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Niedertscheider
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Niedertscheider
Germany

Note: Niedertscheider sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: susanjnorrie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

susanjnorrie
Portugal

Note: susanjnorrie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zoe Bicat
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a takeover of the Internet by wealthy vested interests, because they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- ‘Fast lanes’ for the highest bidder means the slow lane for everyone else. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements which make a balanced and diverse society to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- The internet is a wonderful source of much free and open information. Much more content is now stored digitally, and you have the power at this moment to safeguard standards of information access that are open for all, allowing the opportunity for a European electorate to be well-educated and knowledge-empowered. With the current horrifying level of contempt for ordinary citizens displayed by most political elites, you have the chance right now to take a progressive course of action that supports the people of Europe.
- Please close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, “zero-rating” or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it’s Europe’s turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zoe Bicat
England, UK

Note: Zoe Bicat sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Evelyn Bird
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Evelyn Bird
United Kingdom

Note: Evelyn Bird sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Josephine Downs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Josephine Downs
United Kingdom

Note: Josephine Downs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Winkler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Winkler
Germany

Note: Anna Winkler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jennifer Barnett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jennifer Barnett
United Kingdom

Note: Jennifer Barnett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Berit Franz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Berit Franz
Germany

Note: Berit Franz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: SUNHEART
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

SUNHEART
Germany

Note: SUNHEART sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael wall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael wall
Ireland

Note: Michael wall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susanne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susanne Schmidt
Germany

Note: Susanne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Bayraktar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Bayraktar
Hungary

Note: Anna Bayraktar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Milroy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Milroy
United Kingdom

Note: James Milroy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mahnaz Entezari
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mahnaz Entezari
Sweden

Note: Mahnaz Entezari sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Loïc Albertin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Loïc Albertin
France

—

Note: Loïc Albertin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hansjörg Eger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hansjörg Eger
Germany

Note: Hansjörg Eger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: scott carty
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

scott carty
United Kingdom

Note: scott carty sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Crawford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Crawford
Spain

Note: Peter Crawford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fiona Harvey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fiona Harvey
United Kingdom

Note: Fiona Harvey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Harmar-Brown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Harmar-Brown
United Kingdom

Note: Christine Harmar-Brown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amila Pasic
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amila Pasic
Sweden

Note: Amila Pasic sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Trygve Forssten
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Trygve Forssten
Sweden

Note: Trygve Forssten sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Jelley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Jelley
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Jelley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ana
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ana
Spain

Note: Ana sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Imi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Imi
United Kingdom

Note: Imi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Herberts
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Herberts
Latvia

—

Note: Herberts sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christopher Jofeh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christopher Jofeh
United Kingdom

Note: Christopher Jofeh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen McNeilly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen McNeilly
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen McNeilly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sally Pinhe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sally Pinhe
United Kingdom

Note: Sally Pinhe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: peter lawrie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

peter lawrie
United Kingdom

Note: peter lawrie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frances McDonnell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frances McDonnell
United Kingdom

Note: Frances McDonnell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: kim.knox
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

kim.knox
United Kingdom

Note: kim.knox sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: anton teuling
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

anton teuling
Netherlands

Note: anton teuling sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jill Green
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jill Green
United Kingdom

Note: Jill Green sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vee banks
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vee banks
United Kingdom

Note: Vee banks sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Clare Churley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Clare Churley
United Kingdom

Note: Clare Churley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Valerie Coghlan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Valerie Coghlan
Ireland

—

Note: Valerie Coghlan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Ford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Ford
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Ford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joanne Wilburn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

In the interests of a free and open society communication should be open to all.

--

Joanne Wilburn
United Kingdom

Note: Joanne Wilburn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen J. Townshend
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen J. Townshend
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen J. Townshend sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: António Andrade
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

António Andrade
Portugal

Note: António Andrade sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Brittijn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Brittijn
United Kingdom

Note: Christine Brittijn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kirsty Paton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kirsty Paton
Italy

Note: Kirsty Paton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chloe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chloe
Ireland

Note: Chloe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Diana Collingwood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Diana Collingwood
United Kingdom

Note: Diana Collingwood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jamil Bacha
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jamil Bacha
United Kingdom

Note: Jamil Bacha sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Olivia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Olivia
United Kingdom

Note: Olivia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Baert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Baert
Netherlands

Note: Baert sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: vicki
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

vicki
Spain

—

Note: vicki sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Harald Diesen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Harald Diesen
United Kingdom

Note: Harald Diesen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sara Ferreira
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sara Ferreira
Portugal

Note: Sara Ferreira sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ken Thomas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ken Thomas
United Kingdom

Note: Ken Thomas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Fleming
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Fleming
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Fleming sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Boyd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Boyd
United Kingdom

Note: David Boyd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stacey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stacey
United Kingdom

Note: Stacey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julia
United Kingdom

Note: Julia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carey Chapman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carey Chapman
United Kingdom

Note: Carey Chapman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Korn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Korn
United Kingdom

Note: John Korn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Declan Lee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Declan Lee
Ireland

Note: Declan Lee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ezio Maina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ezio Maina
Italy

—

Note: Ezio Maina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marlene van Duin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marlene van Duin
Netherlands

Note: Marlene van Duin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: bradley.jadir
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

bradley.jadir
United Kingdom

Note: bradley.jadir sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dave porter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dave porter
United Kingdom

Note: Dave porter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vaclav
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vaclav
Czech Republic

Note: Vaclav sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: renee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

renee
Netherlands

Note: renee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: davearnold0
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

davearnold0
United Kingdom

Note: davearnold0 sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Olden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Olden
United Kingdom

Note: David Olden sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hans Nielsen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hans Nielsen
Denmark

Note: Hans Nielsen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: mario grondman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

mario grondman
Netherlands

Note: mario grondman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin
Spain

—

Note: Martin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kravetz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kravetz
Senegal

Note: Kravetz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linda
United Kingdom

Note: Linda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Donatella Lecci
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Donatella Lecci
United Kingdom

Note: Donatella Lecci sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Toase
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Toase
United Kingdom

Note: David Toase sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lucy Johnson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lucy Johnson
United Kingdom

Note: Lucy Johnson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ARL
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ARL
United Kingdom

Note: ARL sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: G THOMSON
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

G THOMSON
United Kingdom

Note: G THOMSON sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tashtego
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tashtego
United Kingdom

Note: Tashtego sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: S. Morley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

S. Morley
United Kingdom

Note: S. Morley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Williams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Williams
United Kingdom

Note: John Williams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philip Jenneson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philip Jenneson
United Kingdom

Note: Philip Jenneson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Geesche Harbort
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Geesche Harbort
Germany

—

Note: Geesche Harbort sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Ward
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Ward
United Kingdom

Note: David Ward sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Battyányi Zsolt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Battyányi Zsolt
Hungary

Note: Battyányi Zsolt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Irene Ahlkvist
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Irene Ahlkvist
Sweden

Note: Irene Ahlkvist sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Yannick Papenfuß
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Yannick Papenfuß
Germany

Note: Yannick Papenfuß sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Per Bilse
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Per Bilse
United Kingdom

Note: Per Bilse sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Benoit
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Benoît
France

Note: Benoît sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick Dibben
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick Dibben
United Kingdom

Note: Nick Dibben sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dianne Brothwell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dianne Brothwell
France

Note: Dianne Brothwell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Peoples
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Peoples
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Peoples sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick Brandon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick Brandon
United Kingdom

Note: Nick Brandon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margaret Hagan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margaret Hagan
United Kingdom

Note: Margaret Hagan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Mariek
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Mariek
Ireland

Note: Anne Mariek sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dave
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dave
Spain

—

Note: Dave sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christopher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christopher
Poland

—

Note: Christopher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Wheeler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Wheeler
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Wheeler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frank
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frank
Netherlands

Note: Frank sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Geoffrey Nutt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Geoffrey Nutt
United Kingdom

Note: Geoffrey Nutt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Holan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Holan
Czech Republic

Note: David Holan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ben
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ben
United Kingdom

Note: Ben sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marten
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marten
Netherlands

Note: Marten sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Claire
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bonneville Claire
FRANCE

—

Note: Claire Bonneville sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen Gall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen Gall
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen Gall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marianne Leys
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marianne Leys
Nederland

Note: Marianne Leys sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: stilian_satchkov
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

stilian satchkov
Bulgaria

Note: stilian satchkov sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne
United Kingdom

Note: Anne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lajos Ferenczi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lajos Ferenczi
Hungary

Note: Lajos Ferenczi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Donaldson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Donaldson
United Kingdom

Note: Martin Donaldson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bertil Johnsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as the principles guiding these rules foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- It takes no great thinker to understand that this is one factor that lies in the heart of democracy. Help prove that real democracy lies at the heart of EU. The British doubted that - it is time to be clear about that - very clear.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bertil Johnsson
Sweden

Note: Bertil Johnsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Schouten
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Schouten
Netherlands

Note: Schouten sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex Flitcroft
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex Flitcroft
United Kingdom

Note: Alex Flitcroft sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Geoff Brown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Geoff Brown
United Kingdom

Note: Geoff Brown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Louise Hunt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Louise Hunt
United Kingdom

Note: Louise Hunt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Hässelborg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Hässelborg
Sweden

Note: David Hässelborg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Edward Lane
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Edward Lane
Spain

Note: Edward Lane sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tabitha Cunniffe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tabitha Cunniffe
United Kingdom

Note: Tabitha Cunniffe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ash
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ash

United States of America

Note: ash sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: mirko.penko
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mirko Penko
Slovenia

Note: mirko penko sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rob Bell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rob Bell
United Kingdom

Note: Rob Bell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kory Williams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kory Williams
United Kingdom

Note: Kory Williams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Hodgkins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Hodgkins
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Hodgkins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew nisbet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew nisbet
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew nisbet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julie Bowyer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julie Bowyer
United Kingdom

Note: Julie Bowyer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philip Wainman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BD6 3RAEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In BD6 3RArazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philip Wainman
United Kingdom

Note: Philip Wainman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joe Nolan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joe Nolan
Czech Republic

Note: Joe Nolan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James
United Kingdom

Note: James sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: danielle.grunberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

danielle grunberg
France

—

Note: danielle grunberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eddie Ryan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eddie Ryan
Ireland

Note: Eddie Ryan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vincenzo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vincenzo
Italy

—

Note: Vincenzo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Meir Stolear
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Meir Stolear
United Kingdom

Note: Meir Stolear sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rita Kent
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rita Kent
United Kingdom

Note: Rita Kent sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janet O'Sullivan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janet O'Sullivan
United Kingdom

Note: Janet O'Sullivan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: kontur
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

kontur
Austria

Note: kontur sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Violet Houtzagers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Violet Houtzagers
Netherlands

Note: Violet Houtzagers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gemma MacNaught
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gemma MacNaught
United Kingdom

Note: Gemma MacNaught sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: emma murphy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

emma murphy
United Kingdom

Note: emma murphy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hans Jørn Kolmos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hans Jørn Kolmos
Denmark

Note: Hans Jørn Kolmos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Haggerty
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Haggerty
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Haggerty sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: MARTH Edmée
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

MARTH Edmée
Luxembourg

Note: MARTH Edmée sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Viktor Jönsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Viktor Jönsson
Sweden

Note: Viktor Jönsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fenella Jeffers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fenella Jeffers
United Kingdom

Note: Fenella Jeffers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ggabriel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ggabriel
Portugal

Note: Ggabriel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Moore
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Moore
Ireland

Note: Brian Moore sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: R Freeman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

R Freeman
United Kingdom

Note: R Freeman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Warman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Warman
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Warman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: László Fekete
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

László Fekete
Hungary

Note: László Fekete sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Thörlund
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Thörlund
Sweden

Note: John Thörlund sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony Hamilton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

The internet should be a citizens service not a business service.

--

Tony Hamilton
United Kingdom

—

Note: Tony Hamilton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robin Stephenson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robin Stephenson
United Kingdom

Note: Robin Stephenson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fred Ritzhaupt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fred Ritzhaupt
Germany

Note: Fred Ritzhaupt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Aindow
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Aindow
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Aindow sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John McCavert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John McCavert
United Kingdom

Note: John McCavert sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lorna Stokes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lorna Stokes
United Kingdom

Note: Lorna Stokes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julia Tint
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julia Tint
United Kingdom

Note: Julia Tint sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Xrysoula
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Xrysoula
Greece

—

Note: Xrysoula sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katie Norman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Katie Norman
United Kingdom

Note: Katie Norman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Simms
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Simms
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Simms sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Hunter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Hunter
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Hunter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Waltraud Boeing
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Waltraud Boeing
Luxembourg

Note: Waltraud Boeing sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aisling byrne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aisling byrne
Ireland

Note: Aisling byrne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joe Gaze
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joe Gaze
United Kingdom

Note: Joe Gaze sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ROBERT HARRISON
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ROBERT HARRISON
United Kingdom

Note: ROBERT HARRISON sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Samantha Kruger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Samantha Kruger
United Kingdom

Note: Samantha Kruger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: dr. Nino Rode
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

dr. Nino Rode
Slovenia

Note: dr. Nino Rode sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Craig Mather
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Craig Mather
United Kingdom

Note: Craig Mather sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Danielle Harper
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Danielle Harper
United Kingdom

Note: Danielle Harper sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: L.D. Postma
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

L.D. Postma
Netherlands

Note: L.D. Postma sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leyla yildirim
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leyla yildirim
Belgium

Note: Leyla yildirim sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: patricia bullock
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

patricia bullock
United Kingdom

Note: patricia bullock sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Win Gibson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

W Gibson
United Kingdom

Note: Win Gibson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Bird
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Bird
United Kingdom

Note: Martin Bird sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hava Salter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hava Salter
United Kingdom

Note: Hava Salter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lorraine Brown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lorraine Brown
United Kingdom

Note: Lorraine Brown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Dolan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Dolan
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Dolan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bernie Allen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bernie Allen
United Kingdom

Note: Bernie Allen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Darren May
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Darren May
United Kingdom

Note: Darren May sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane de Rennes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane de Rennes
United Kingdom

Note: Jane de Rennes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael O'Dowd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael O'Dowd
Ireland

Note: Michael O'Dowd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: PJ Cellino
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

PJ Cellino
United Kingdom

Note: PJ Cellino sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eoin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eoin
Ireland

—

Note: Eoin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Phil
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Phil
United Kingdom

Note: Phil sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: hamid
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

hamid
United Kingdom

Note: hamid sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: René Bjerre Andersen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

René Bjerre Andersen
Denmark

Note: René Bjerre Andersen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Isabella Isaksson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Isabella Isaksson
Sweden

Note: Isabella Isaksson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Valerie Tasker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Valerie Tasker
United Kingdom

Note: Valerie Tasker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ruth Brewer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ruth Brewer
Ireland

Note: Ruth Brewer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: R Barlow
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

R Barlow
United Kingdom

Note: R Barlow sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joel Weston
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joel Weston
United Kingdom

Note: Joel Weston sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Salisbury
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Economic power is becoming more and more concentrated into fewer and fewer individuals and corporations. Until a solution can be found to this problem, governments must do what they can to prevent this power becoming entrenched. Allowing the rich to gain privileged access to the internet would be such an entrenchment, and should be opposed.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Salisbury
United Kingdom

—

Note: Richard Salisbury sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Yvonne Hutchcraft
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Yvonne Hutchcraft
United Kingdom

Note: Yvonne Hutchcraft sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Giorgio Bonazzi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Giorgio Bonazzi
Italy

—

Note: Giorgio Bonazzi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sally Langdon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sally Langdon
United Kingdom

Note: Sally Langdon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: William Batts
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

William Batts
United Kingdom

Note: William Batts sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jairaj
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jairaj
United Kingdom

Note: Jairaj sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dominic
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dominic
Germany

—

Note: Dominic sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kate
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kate
United Kingdom

Note: Kate sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elizabeth Webb
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elizabeth Webb
United Kingdom

Note: Elizabeth Webb sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr Ewart Carson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr Ewart Carson
United Kingdom

Note: Dr Ewart Carson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Williams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Williams
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Williams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: joseph Heron
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

joseph Heron
United Kingdom

Note: joseph Heron sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anthony Charlton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anthony Charlton
United Kingdom

Note: Anthony Charlton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Larsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Larsson
Sweden

—

Note: Peter Larsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Annita
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annita
United Kingdom

Note: Annita sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carsten Løfting
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carsten Løfting
Denmark

Note: Carsten Løfting sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: steve murphy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

steve murphy
United Kingdom

Note: steve murphy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Wodzianski
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Wodzianski
United Kingdom

Note: Anna Wodzianski sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nathan Glyde
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nathan Glyde
United Kingdom

Note: Nathan Glyde sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adélia Joana dos Santos Pinéu O'Brien
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adélia Joana dos Santos Pinéu O'Brien
Portugal

Note: Adélia Joana dos Santos Pinéu O'Brien sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Günther Mayer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Günther Mayer
Germany

—

Note: Günther Mayer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex
Austria

Note: Alex sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vincent Gerris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vincent Gerris
Netherlands

Note: Vincent Gerris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Dudley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Dudley
United Kingdom

Note: David Dudley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dave D
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dave D
United Kingdom

Note: Dave D sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simone Jaeger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simone Jaeger
United Kingdom

Note: Simone Jaeger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Starkey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Starkey
United Kingdom

Note: David Starkey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gillian McCulloch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gillian McCulloch
United Kingdom

Note: Gillian McCulloch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maureen Edwards
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maureen Edwards
United Kingdom

Note: Maureen Edwards sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Phil OConnell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philip OConnell
Ireland

Note: Phil OConnell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katrien Goemans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Katrien Goemans
Belgium

Note: Katrien Goemans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter
United Kingdom

Note: Peter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David England
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David England
United Kingdom

Note: David England sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eda Soar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Eda Soar

UK

—

Note: Eda Soar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr Toni Bunnell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr Toni Bunnell
United Kingdom

Note: Dr Toni Bunnell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Johnson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Johnson
United Kingdom

Note: Christine Johnson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marcel Kirsche
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marcel Kirsche
Germany

Note: Marcel Kirsche sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simeon Metev
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simeon Metev
Bulgaria

Note: Simeon Metev sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zoé Lhomme
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zoé Lhomme
France

—

Note: Zoé Lhomme sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Benny Rees
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Benny Rees
United Kingdom

Note: Benny Rees sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lucy Lawrance
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lucy Lawrance
United Kingdom

Note: Lucy Lawrance sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robin Boyd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robin Boyd
United Kingdom

Note: Robin Boyd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Evelyn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Evelyn
Germany

Note: Evelyn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hazel Pelham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hazel Pelham
United Kingdom

Note: Hazel Pelham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert
Slovenia

Note: Robert sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philip Kemp
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philip Kemp
United Kingdom

Note: Philip Kemp sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katja Abel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Katja Abel
United Kingdom

Note: Katja Abel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Forsyth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Forsyth
Ireland

Note: Mark Forsyth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Faith Oxford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Faith Oxford
United Kingdom

Note: Faith Oxford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr. C A Bos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr Dr. C A Bos
Netherlands
Netherlands

—

Note: Dr. C A Bos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lena
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lena
Belgium

Note: Lena sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Penny Kenton-Russ
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Penny Kenton-Russ
Sweden

Note: Penny Kenton-Russ sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pablo Delmas Benito
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pablo Delmas Benito
Netherlands

Note: Pablo Delmas Benito sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sara Shaw
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sara Shaw
United Kingdom

Note: Sara Shaw sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: daniel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

daniel
France

—

Note: daniel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ros
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

john
United Kingdom

Note: john sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Barlow
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Barlow
United Kingdom

Note: John Barlow sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rob Lichtendahl
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rob Lichtendahl
Netherlands

Note: Rob Lichtendahl sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marie Heavey bartley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marie Heavey bartley
Ireland

Note: Marie Heavey bartley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: margherita canessa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

margherita canessa
Italy

—

Note: margherita canessa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elizabeth Valdez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elizabeth Valdez
United Kingdom

Note: Elizabeth Valdez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mitja Smrekar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mitja Smrekar
Slovenia

Note: Mitja Smrekar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carolyn Leary
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carolyn Leary
United Kingdom

Note: Carolyn Leary sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex
Netherlands

Note: Alex sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pat Fisher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pat Fisher
United Kingdom

Note: Pat Fisher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarah Mumford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarah Mumford
United Kingdom

Note: Sarah Mumford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dave
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dave
United Kingdom

Note: Dave sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katrina Dorman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Katrina Dorman
United Kingdom

Note: Katrina Dorman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: George Spyridakis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

George Spyridakis
Greece

Note: George Spyridakis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Demiani
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Demiani
Austria

Note: Demiani sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mandy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mandy
Germany

Note: Mandy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarah
United Kingdom

Note: Sarah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Moissonnier Ryan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Moissonnier Ryan
France

—

Note: Moissonnier Ryan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joanna Coombs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joanna Coombs
United Kingdom

Note: Joanna Coombs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elliott Shoults
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elliott Shoults
United Kingdom

Note: Elliott Shoults sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Per Bengtsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Per Bengtsson
Sweden

Note: Per Bengtsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carolyn Belcher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carolyn Belcher
United Kingdom

Note: Carolyn Belcher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: E
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

E
United Kingdom

Note: E sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please email reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mads Hansen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mads Hansen
Denmark

Note: Mads Hansen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Guy Naylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Guy Naylor
United Kingdom

Note: Guy Naylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Natalie Somers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Natalie Somers
United Kingdom

Note: Natalie Somers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Young
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Young
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Young sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: GBL Tan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

GBL Tan
Netherlands

Note: GBL Tan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kam Atwal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kam Atwal
United Kingdom

Note: Kam Atwal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Kavanagh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Kavanagh
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Kavanagh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Markus Lindinger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Markus Lindinger
Germany

Note: Markus Lindinger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: oliver howard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:19:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

oliver howard
United Kingdom

Note: oliver howard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Evelyn Tingle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Evelyn Tingle
United Kingdom

Note: Evelyn Tingle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marguerite Courtade
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marguerite Courtade
Ireland

Note: Marguerite Courtade sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simon Wilmshurst-Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simon Wilmshurst-Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Simon Wilmshurst-Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Walker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Walker
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Walker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robin Warren
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robin Warren
United Kingdom

Note: Robin Warren sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bas Becu
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bas Becu
Netherlands

Note: Bas Becu sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jason
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jason
United Kingdom

Note: Jason sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Dando
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Dando
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Dando sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sean Oenden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sean Oenden
United Kingdom

Note: Sean Oenden sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: grace douglas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

grace douglas
United Kingdom

Note: grace douglas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jeremy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jeremy
United Kingdom

Note: Jeremy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sean
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sean
United Kingdom

Note: Sean sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: paul tobin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

paul tobin
Ireland

—

Note: paul tobin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matthias Peters
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matthias Peters
United Kingdom

Note: Matthias Peters sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne
Netherlands

Note: Anne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Таня Джекова
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Таня Джекова
Bulgaria

Note: Таня Джекова sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Gouldstone
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Gouldstone
United Kingdom

Note: David Gouldstone sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: kristina becker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

kristina becker
United Kingdom

Note: kristina becker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Geoffrey Kent
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Geoffrey Kent
United Kingdom

Note: Geoffrey Kent sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gail Holliman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gail Holliman
United Kingdom

Note: Gail Holliman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joyce Bateman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

J Bateman
UK

—

Note: Joyce Bateman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vanessa Mette
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vanessa Mette
Germany

Note: Vanessa Mette sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carlos Rebelo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carlos Rebelo
Portugal

Note: Carlos Rebelo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Shaw
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Shaw
United Kingdom

Note: David Shaw sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Milt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Milt
Greece

Note: Milt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patrik Nusszer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patrik Nusszer
Hungary

Note: Patrik Nusszer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Farrah Wahby
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Farrah Wahby
United Kingdom

Note: Farrah Wahby sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sian
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sian
United Kingdom

Note: Sian sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ken Drake
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ken Drake
United Kingdom

Note: Ken Drake sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jesse Thompson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jesse Thompson
United Kingdom

Note: Jesse Thompson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sandra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sandra
United Kingdom

Note: Sandra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: G.Luca-Mulders
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

G.Luca-Mulders
Netherlands

Note: G.Luca-Mulders sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Martin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Martin
United Kingdom

Note: Christine Martin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Luisella
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Luisella
Spain

Note: Luisella sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adrian Dragos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adrian Dragos
United Kingdom

Note: Adrian Dragos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: eusebio_manuel_vestias_pecurto_vestias
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

eusebio manuel vestias pecurto vestias
Portugal

Note: eusebio manuel vestias pecurto vestias sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex Jolly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex Jolly
United Kingdom

Note: Alex Jolly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anthony Ross
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anthony Ross
Portugal

Note: Anthony Ross sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ruth rozelaar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ruth rozelaar
United Kingdom

Note: ruth rozelaar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ossian Gustavsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ossian Gustavsson
Sweden

Note: Ossian Gustavsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shimrit Manning
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shimrit Manning
United Kingdom

Note: Shimrit Manning sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Madhu Anhes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Madhu Anhes
United Kingdom

Note: Madhu Anhes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angela Howard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angela Howard
United Kingdom

Note: Angela Howard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J.Thompson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J Thompson
United Kingdom

Note: J Thompson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Keel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Keel
United Kingdom

Note: Brian Keel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jenny Moran
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jenny Moran
UK

Note: Jenny Moran sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Odile CHEVALLEY
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Odile CHEVALLEY
France

—

Note: Odile CHEVALLEY sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: chris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

chris
United Kingdom

Note: chris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christopher Mayne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christopher Mayne
United Kingdom

Note: Christopher Mayne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caroline Papp
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caroline Papp
United Kingdom

Note: Caroline Papp sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Glynn Thomas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Glynn Thomas
United Kingdom

Note: Glynn Thomas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexander Theofanous
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

"Just because you CAN doesn't mean you SHOULD".

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexander Theofanous
Sweden

Note: Alexander Theofanous sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Devinderpal Sodhi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Devinderpal Sodhi
United Kingdom

Note: Devinderpal Sodhi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: José R. Asensio
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

José R. Asensio
Spain

—

Note: José R. Asensio sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sara Nilsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sara Nilsson
Sweden

Note: Sara Nilsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John
United Kingdom

Note: John sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Evie Steffens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

We do not want double standards in access and speed of the internet.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Evie Steffens
Denmark

—

Evie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wolfgang
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wolfgang
Austria

Note: Wolfgang sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Potts-Byrne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Potts-Byrne
United Kingdom

Note: Christine Potts-Byrne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Divya Ram
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Divya Ram
United Kingdom

Note: Divya Ram sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caoilinn Handley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caoilinn Handley
Ireland

—

Note: Caoilinn Handley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bruce
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bruce
Germany

—

Note: Bruce sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rick Nickerson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rick Nickerson
United Kingdom

Note: Rick Nickerson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anjali Patel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anjali Patel
United Kingdom

Note: Anjali Patel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barbara Tyrer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barbara Tyrer
United Kingdom

Note: Barbara Tyrer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andy Pearson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andy Pearson
United Kingdom

Note: Andy Pearson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barbro Lönnberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barbro Lönnberg
Sweden

—

Note: Barbro Lönnberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lionel Reuben
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lionel Reuben
United Kingdom

Note: Lionel Reuben sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avAzimages.avAz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

A
United Kingdom

Note: A sent you this message as part of an AvAz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avAz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@AvAz.org

From: Kim Gollard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kim Gollard
United Kingdom

Note: Kim Gollard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Root Cartwright
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Root Cartwright
United Kingdom

Note: Root Cartwright sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karine Parello-Plesner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karine Parello-Plesner
Denmark

Note: Karine Parello-Plesner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Baert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Baert
Netherlands

Note: Peter Baert sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gavin Atkinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gavin Atkinson
United Kingdom

Note: Gavin Atkinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Etienne Edberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Etienne Edberg
Sweden

Note: Etienne Edberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Stevenson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Stevenson
United Kingdom

Note: David Stevenson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kollet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kollet
Sweden

—

Note: Kollet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Isabel Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Isabel Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Isabel Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas Woodman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas Woodman
United Kingdom

Note: Thomas Woodman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Liz Brealey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Liz Brealey
United Kingdom

Note: Liz Brealey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mary
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mary
United Kingdom

Note: Mary sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hans-Christian Hornum
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hans-Christian Hornum
Denmark

Note: Hans-Christian Hornum sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Curt Mönch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Curt Mönch
Sweden

Note: Curt Mönch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bo Eklund
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bo Eklund
Sweden

Note: Bo Eklund sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ITA HOBELL
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ITA HOBELL
United Kingdom

Note: ITA HOBELL sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: SRECKO BALENT
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

SRECKO BALENT
Slovenia

Note: SRECKO BALENT sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janis Birchall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janis Birchall
United Kingdom

Note: Janis Birchall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amanda holt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amanda holt
United Kingdom

Note: Amanda holt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: S.popovic
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

S popovic
United Kingdom

Note: S popovic sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Myers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Myers
England, UK.

Note: Paul Myers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lindsay Bray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lindsay Bray
United Kingdom

Note: Lindsay Bray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Renate Behrbohm-Riedel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Renate Behrbohm-Riedel
Germany

Note: Renate Behrbohm-Riedel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Clatworthy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Clatworthy
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Clatworthy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerard van der Werff
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerard van der Werff
Netherlands

Note: Gerard van der Werff sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Deborah Hofman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Deborah Hofman
United Kingdom

Note: Deborah Hofman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: siem jonk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

siem jonk
Netherlands

Note: siem jonk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: marcel focsa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

marcel focsa
Romania

Note: marcel focsa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: robert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

robert
United Kingdom

Note: robert sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: dr_peter_labanyi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

dr peter labanyi
Ireland

—

Note: dr peter labanyi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Heinz schmidt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Heinz schmidt
Sweden

Note: Heinz schmidt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: André Campos Farinha
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

André Campos Farinha
Portugal

Note: André Campos Farinha sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rowena Swallow
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rowena Swallow
United Kingdom

Note: Rowena Swallow sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marlene Fitzpatrick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marlene Fitzpatrick
Ireland

Note: Marlene Fitzpatrick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger Levett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger Levett
United Kingdom

Note: Roger Levett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aaron Jackson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aaron Jackson
United Kingdom

Note: Aaron Jackson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Syd Kent
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Syd Kent
United Kingdom

Note: Syd Kent sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kate Bruce
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kate Bruce
United Kingdom

Note: Kate Bruce sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Willem Oderkerk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Willem Oderkerk
Netherlands

Note: Willem Oderkerk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julie Najj
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julie Najj
United Kingdom

Note: Julie Najj sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria O'Riordan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria O'Riordan
United Kingdom

Note: Maria O'Riordan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Epps
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Epps
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Epps sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris webber
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris webber
United Kingdom

Note: Chris webber sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Hawkes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Martin Hawkes
Ireland

—

Note: Martin Hawkes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gisela Lampenscherf
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gisela Lampenscherf
Germany

Note: Gisela Lampenscherf sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anthony Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anthony Taylor
United Kingdom

Note: Anthony Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Ojuoye
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Ojuoye
United Kingdom

Note: Martin Ojuoye sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rachel Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rachel Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Rachel Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Don Clark
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Don Clark
United Kingdom

Note: Don Clark sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: STEPHANIE CORREIA
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

STEPHANIE CORREIA
United Kingdom

Note: STEPHANIE CORREIA sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony Pasternak
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Regards...

Tony Pasternak

UK

—

Note: Tony Pasternak sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Arnopp
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Arnopp
Ireland

Note: Robert Arnopp sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Manuela Eder
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Manuela Eder
Germany

Note: Manuela Eder sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dave
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dave
United Kingdom

Note: Dave sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lut Gheysen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lut Gheysen
Belgium

Note: Lut Gheysen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christina
United Kingdom

Note: Christina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Garry Douglas Martin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Garry Douglas Martin
United Kingdom

Note: Garry Douglas Martin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert twycros
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert twycros
United Kingdom

Note: Robert twycros sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen Stylianou
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helen Stylianou
Cyprus

Note: Helen Stylianou sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Claire Schwickerath
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Claire Schwickerath
Belgium

Note: Claire Schwickerath sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Renato Maurício
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Renato Maurício
Portugal

Note: Renato Maurício sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vivecca Biggs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vivecca Biggs
United Kingdom

Note: Vivecca Biggs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Benjamin Grzimek
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Benjamin Grzimek
Germany

Note: Benjamin Grzimek sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: JOE
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

JOE
United Kingdom

Note: JOE sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pauline Schaap
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pauline Schaap
United Kingdom

Note: Pauline Schaap sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Diana Probst
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Diana Probst
United Kingdom

Note: Diana Probst sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sylwester Milejski
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sylwester Milejski
United Kingdom

Note: Sylwester Milejski sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Magnus Lynge Johansen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Magnus Lynge Johansen
Denmark

Note: Magnus Lynge Johansen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elizabeth Upton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elizabeth Upton
Italy

—

Note: Elizabeth Upton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Allan Kukk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Allan Kukk
Estonia

Note: Allan Kukk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Sinclair
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Sinclair
United Kingdom

Note: Anna Sinclair sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: zdravko Cebokli
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

zdravko Cebokli
Slovenia

Note: zdravko Cebokli sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marcelle Kashmen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marcelle Kashmen
United Kingdom

Note: Marcelle Kashmen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul
United Kingdom

Note: Paul sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rosa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rosa
Portugal

Note: Rosa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matthew
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matthew
United Kingdom

Note: Matthew sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Walter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Walter
United Kingdom

Note: Steve Walter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: pat dowman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

pat dowman
United Kingdom

Note: pat dowman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bertoli
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bertoli
France

—

Note: Bertoli sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ciaran Scully
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ciaran Scully
Ireland

Note: Ciaran Scully sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gwylan Brinkworth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gwylan Brinkworth
United Kingdom

Note: Gwylan Brinkworth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andy Irvine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andy Irvine
United Kingdom

Note: Andy Irvine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: michaelveitch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

michaelveitch
United Kingdom

Note: michaelveitch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Green
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Green
United Kingdom

Note: John Green sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexandra Williams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexandra Williams
United Kingdom

Note: Alexandra Williams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: hugo deroulou
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

hugo deroulou
Belgium

Note: hugo deroulou sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Blanche Gatt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Blanche Gatt
Malta

Note: Blanche Gatt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Taimoor Mirza
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Taimoor Mirza
United Kingdom

Note: Taimoor Mirza sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rita Leighton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rita Leighton
United Kingdom

Note: Rita Leighton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Teesdale
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Teesdale
United Kingdom

Note: John Teesdale sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angela Evans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angela Evans
Spain

Note: Angela Evans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick
United Kingdom

Note: Nick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Peek
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Peek
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Peek sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julie Switsur
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julie Switsur
United Kingdom

Note: Julie Switsur sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Williams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Williams
United Kingdom

Note: David Williams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Claudia Gerardi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Claudia Gerardi
Germany

—

Note: Claudia Gerardi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sara-lea small
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sara-lea small
United Kingdom

Note: sara-lea small sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tinne Stubbe Østergaard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tinne Stubbe Østergaard
Denmark

Note: Tinne Stubbe Østergaard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lindi Louise
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lindi Louise
United Kingdom

Note: Lindi Louise sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Cash
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Cash
United Kingdom

Note: Anne Cash sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ioannis Liopas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ioannis Liopas
United Kingdom

Note: Ioannis Liopas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: juan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

juan
Spain

—

Note: juan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Slinger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Slinger
United Kingdom

Note: David Slinger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stan Potter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stan Potter
United Kingdom

Note: Stan Potter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adam Bardon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adam Bardon
United Kingdom

Note: Adam Bardon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rob Dreaming
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, “zero-rating” or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it’s Europe’s turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rob
United Kingdom

Note: Rob sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: JAFFRÉZIC
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

JAFFRÉZIC
France

Note: JAFFRÉZIC sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen
United Kingdom

Note: Karen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Klaas de Boer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

The most important for YOU now is that you, as you always must do, LISTEN TO THE PEOPLE and of course NOT TO commercial interests.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Klaas de Boer
Germany

Note: Klaas de Boer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Manti
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Manti
Cyprus

Note: Anna Manti sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peet
Germany

—

Note: Peet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elisabeth Bär-Cansell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elisabeth Bär-Cansell
France

Note: Elisabeth Bär-Cansell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Claudia Müller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Claudia Müller
Germany

Note: Claudia Müller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roslyn Cook
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roslyn Cook
United Kingdom

Note: Roslyn Cook sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Veronica
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Veronica
United Kingdom

Note: Veronica sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Jolly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Jolly
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew Jolly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matthew Pinto
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matthew Pinto
United Kingdom

Note: Matthew Pinto sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aileen beevers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aileen beevers
United Kingdom

Note: Aileen beevers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: W. van der Geer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

W. van der Geer
Netherlands

Note: W. van der Geer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emmalu Fox
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emmalu Fox
United Kingdom

Note: Emmalu Fox sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elena Starace
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elena Starace
Italy

Note: Elena Starace sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Didier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Didier
United Kingdom

Note: Didier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick
Denmark

Note: Nick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Blake
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Blake
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew Blake sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nigel Hodson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Nigel Hodson]
[Unite Kingdom]

—

Note: Nigel Hodson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Harambe Silverback
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Harambe Silverback
Canada

Note: Harambe Silverback sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Per Ekehorn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Per Ekehorn
United Kingdom

Note: Per Ekehorn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ioannis Konstantatos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ioannis Konstantatos
Greece

—

Note: Ioannis Konstantatos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria Langemark
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria Langemark
Denmark

Note: Maria Langemark sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Derek Richards
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Derek Richards
United Kingdom

Note: Derek Richards sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne-Marie Melster
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne-Marie Melster
Germany

Note: Anne-Marie Melster sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sandy Ball
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sandy Ball
United Kingdom

Note: Sandy Ball sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sue Clarke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sue Clarke
United Kingdom

Note: Sue Clarke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kathy Martin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kathy Martin
[sender_countrFrance

Note: Kathy Martin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ruth Becker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ruth Becker
Germany

Note: Ruth Becker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel Ström
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel Ström
Sweden

Note: Daniel Ström sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dave Draper
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dave Draper
United Kingdom

Note: Dave Draper sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sebasrian
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sebasrian
United Kingdom

Note: Sebasrian sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alice Yarrington
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alice Yarrington
France

Note: Alice Yarrington sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Klajd Zyla
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Klajd Zyla
Germany

Note: Klajd Zyla sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jerry Essgren
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jerry Essgren
sverige

—

Note: Jerry Essgren sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Humphreys
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Humphreys
United Kingdom

Note: Brian Humphreys sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Celia Hemstock
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Celia Hemstock
United Kingdom

Note: Celia Hemstock sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Lindley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Lindley
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Lindley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria Filipa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria Filipa
Portugal

Note: Maria Filipa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Yasmina Poggi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Yasmina Poggi]
[Ireland]

—

Note: Yasmina Poggi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Winfried Boxleitner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis: <https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr. Winfried Boxleitner
Austria

Note: Dr. Winfried Boxleitner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Antoinette Reilly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Antoinette Reilly
Ireland

—

Note: Antoinette Reilly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ylva Haraldsdotter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ylva Haraldsdotter
Sweden

Note: Ylva Haraldsdotter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Grieve
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Grieve
United Kingdom

Note: James Grieve sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helen
United Kingdom

Note: Helen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Barrington
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

As a passionate UK-remainer

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Barrington
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Barrington sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vincent
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vincent
Ireland

Note: Vincent sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Danko
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Danko
Serbia

—

Note: Danko sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Camilla Flatres
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Camilla Flatres
United Kingdom

Note: Camilla Flatres sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Krista Lonsdale
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close ALL loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet!

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Krista Lonsdale
United Kingdom

Note: Krista Lonsdale sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fiona uzzell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fiona uzzell
United Kingdom

Note: Fiona uzzell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fabian Pijpers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fabian Pijpers
Netherlands

Note: Fabian Pijpers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Will Brightwell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Will Brightwell
United Kingdom

Note: Will Brightwell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alan Bradshaw
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alan Bradshaw
United Kingdom

Note: Alan Bradshaw sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J Newman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J Newman
United Kingdom

Note: J Newman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andreja
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andreja
Lithuania

Note: Andreja sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen Pooley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen Pooley
United Kingdom

Note: Karen Pooley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex
Italy

—

Note: Alex sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gabriella Nagy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gabriella Nagy
Hungary

Note: Gabriella Nagy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sven
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sven
Sweden

—

Note: Sven sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jacques Marachlian
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jacques Marachlian
France

—

Note: Jacques Marachlian sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Stephens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Stephens
Italy

—

Note: Andrew Stephens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerald Lane
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerald Lane
Ireland

Note: Gerald Lane sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lilia Polo Dowmat
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lilia Polo Dowmat
Spain

Note: Lilia Polo Dowmat sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: alexandra.thanellou
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

alexandra thanellou
Greece

—

Note: alexandra thanellou sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Corinna Hadigamp
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Corinna Hadigamp
Spain

Note: Corinna Hadigamp sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marc Roughan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marc Roughan
United Kingdom

Note: Marc Roughan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Todd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Todd
France

—

Note: David Todd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barbara Lipinski
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barbara Lipinski
United Kingdom

Note: Barbara Lipinski sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Great
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Great
United Kingdom

Note: Great sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mariann Kjellqvist
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mariann Kjellqvist
Sweden

Note: Mariann Kjellqvist sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jeannie flynn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jeannie flynn
United Kingdom

Note: jeannie flynn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alisha
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alisha
United Kingdom

Note: Alisha sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: johan kloosterhuis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

johan kloosterhuis
Netherlands

Note: johan kloosterhuis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ron balchin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ron balchin
United Kingdom

Note: ron balchin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sonja Granfors
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sonja Granfors
Finland

—

Note: Sonja Granfors sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Hrbacek
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Hrbacek
Czech Republic

Note: Jan Hrbacek sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Woods
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Woods
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Woods sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: anna maria kyriakouli
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

anna maria kyriakouli
Greece

Note: anna maria kyriakouli sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: B.
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

B.
Netherlands

Note: B. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angus Gordon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angus Gordon
United Kingdom

Note: Angus Gordon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ipacs Tamara
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ipacs Tamara
Hungary

Note: Ipacs Tamara sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: June Izbicki
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

June Izbicki
United Kingdom

Note: June Izbicki sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: E. Keur
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

E Keur
Netherlands

Note: E Keur sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Abdullatif Khan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Abdullatif Khan
United Kingdom

Note: Abdullatif Khan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jean Mackay
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jean Mackay
United Kingdom

Note: Jean Mackay sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: margaret brown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

margaret brown
United Kingdom

Note: margaret brown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janet
United Kingdom

Note: Janet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: diego_donadoni
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

diego donadoni
Italy

Note: diego donadoni sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ammar Takieddin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ammar Takieddin
United Kingdom

Note: Ammar Takieddin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul
United Kingdom

Note: Paul sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tomasz Sliwinski
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tomasz Sliwinski
United Kingdom

Note: Tomasz Sliwinski sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angela
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angela
United Kingdom

Note: Angela sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Malcolm
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Malcolm
United Kingdom

Note: Malcolm sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Charles Daybell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Charles Daybell
United Kingdom

Note: Charles Daybell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Madaule Éric
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Madaule Éric
France

Note: Madaule Éric sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Suzanne Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Suzanne Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Suzanne Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Zmugg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Zmugg
Austria

Note: David Zmugg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Matthews
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Matthews
United Kingdom

Note: Brian Matthews sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ruth Wong
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ruth Wong
UK

—

Note: Ruth Wong sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Colin Pari
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Colin Pari
United Kingdom

Note: Colin Pari sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Robert Blom
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Robert Blom
Netherlands

Note: Paul Robert Blom sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cordelia Richman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cordelia Richman
United Kingdom

Note: Cordelia Richman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barbara Heaton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barbara Heaton
United Kingdom

Note: Barbara Heaton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lien Coolen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lien Coolen
Belgium

Note: Lien Coolen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bethany Bisset-Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bethany Bisset-Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Bethany Bisset-Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard
United Kingdom

Note: Richard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adrian Ely
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Like so many other European citizens I rely on the internet for information - not only for professional and personal needs, but also to help me further exercise my democratic rights. Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements to survive next to dominant players.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adrian Ely, United Kingdom

Note: Adrian Ely sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Asyari Usman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Asyari Usman
United Kingdom

Note: Asyari Usman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rima Page
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rima Page
United Kingdom

Note: Rima Page sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dimitris Petrakis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dimitris Petrakis
Greece

Note: Dimitris Petrakis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ana Valverde Mordt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ana Valverde Mordt
Spain

—

Note: Ana Valverde Mordt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Kean
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Kean
United Kingdom

Note: John Kean sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Turnbull
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Turnbull
United Kingdom

Note: John Turnbull sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: George Laughlin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

George Laughlin
United Kingdom

Note: George Laughlin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert lucas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert lucas
United Kingdom

Note: Robert lucas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike O'Hare
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike O'Hare
United Kingdom

Note: Mike O'Hare sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stefan Grasgruber-Kerl
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stefan Grasgruber-Kerl
Austria

Note: Stefan Grasgruber-Kerl sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Diana Carmichael
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Diana Carmichael
United Kingdom

Note: Diana Carmichael sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ann Glover
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ann Glover
United Kingdom

Note: Ann Glover sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: adam chesters
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

adam chesters
United Kingdom

Note: adam chesters sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Erichsen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Erichsen
Denmark

Note: Chris Erichsen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James McEleney
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James McEleney
United Kingdom

Note: James McEleney sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sarah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sarah
Belgium

Note: sarah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wouter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wouter
Belgium

Note: Wouter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tchinn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tchinn
United Kingdom

Note: Tchinn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: marina Pool
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

marina Pool
Netherlands

Note: marina Pool sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Hanley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Hanley
Ireland

Note: David Hanley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shirley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shirley
United Kingdom

Note: Shirley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Edwards
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Edwards
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Edwards sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shane Cannon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shane Cannon
Ireland

Note: Shane Cannon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: philip_noel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Philip Noel]
[UK]

—

Note: philip noel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sonia sutcliffe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sonia sutcliffe
United Kingdom

Note: sonia sutcliffe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Walther Kinkel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Walther Kinkel
Netherlands

Note: Walther Kinkel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Monika
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

In this time, we all value freedom and the right to voice our opinion. Internet is a symbol and means of freedom. Don't let anyone who thinks to be over us, to control it. Thank you for your help.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Monika
Czech Republic

Note: Monika sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Chalmers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Chalmers
United Kingdom

Note: James Chalmers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tom Miceli
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:18:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tom Miceli
Thailand

Note: Tom Miceli sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Glenn Bristol
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 11:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Glenn Bristol
Austria

Note: Glenn Bristol sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org